Funds Bill, Cut a Billion, Faces New Floor Slash

GOP in House May Try to Require That President Impound Unneeded Moneys

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A cut of nearly one billion dollars in President Truman's $42.4 billion spending budget yesterday was recommended by the House Appropriations Committee in a "single package" money bill carrying most appropriations for next year.

The committee approved $23,423,832,918 in 1951 expenditures, against $24,403,321,978 requested by the President, and recommended stiff penalties against officials spending more than Congress voted.

The $979,489,060 slash, whittling back the estimated deficit for next year from $5,133,171,372 to $4,153,682,312, was approved by a straight party-line committee vote.

House Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) immediately reported the bill to the House and arranged to open floor debate Monday.

Republicans, who voted solidly against the committee draft of the bill, meanwhile were preparing to move on the House floor for a further cut of at least 1½ billion dollars.

A motion to be presented by Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.) at the close of House floor consideration may require the President to do the cutting, it was learned.

Although the GOP plan hasn't finally jelled the move now being discussed would require the Administration to withhhold funds from activities that show the least need, and "impound" the further savings in the Treasury.

Such a motion, some highly placed Republicans argue, would avoid "meat ax" instructions to the committee and attract the most Democratic votes.

Republicans meanwhile charged the "package" bill was "rammed through" the committee and that some of the cuts were "phony."

Some of them complained the committee slashed "indiscriminately" in spots, but overlooked more far-reaching economies.

The House Appropriations Committee in turn blasted Government agencies for "greatly overstaffing."

It asked the Budget Bureau to survey each Government unit "with a view to eliminating units or sections within bureaus where overstaffing or duplication exists."

In three other "incentives" to economy, the committee:

1. Approved a flat prohibition against accumulation of annual leave by Federal employes, under

Households Get Warning of Fake Census Reporters

The Better Business Bureau yesterday issued a warning about a salesmanship "gimmick" that can be used only once every 10 years: Imposters who represent themselves as census takers to make a sales lead.

The organization warned that salesmen who represent themselves falsely as census takers are subject to arrest for impersonating a Federal officer. Householders are urged to report this practice to police.

The Better Business Bureau said it participated last year in a national campaign to discourage such "gimmicks," but added that with the start of the 1950 census "some salesmen or bill collectors may misuse the term census to get into a home or to secure certain information."

House Group Votes Curb On Job Leave

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Several thousand Federal jobs would be abolished, annual leave would be restricted, and the Commerce Secretary would be given sweeping power to fire department employes in a bill recommended to the House yesterday by its Appropriations Committee.

In addition, the committee instructed Budget Director Frank Pace to make an immediate study of each Federal agency "with a view to eliminating units or sections within bureaus where overstaffing or duplication exists." Pace has agreed to make the survey.

Budget cuts that would wipe out jobs were fewer than committee members had predicted. However, the employment trend in Government will continue downward for the next 18 months if the committee bill is enacted into law.

The President's budget provided for 28,000 fewer Federal jobs. The committee made reductions in it that would knock out upward of 20,000 additional jobs. For example:

The Postoffice Department would have to release 12,935 employes; the Agriculture Department wouldn't get funds for the 2600 new employes it asked for; the Veterans Administration would have to cut off at least 1000 additional employes and most of them would be in this city; General Services would have to make a big layoff, as its administrative fund was cut by eight million dollars; the defense agencies, Army, Navy, and Air Force, would have to continue reductions of their civilian employes although the committee pointed out the reductions "will not be great."

General Accounting would have

Funds to give the Federal Bureau of Investigation 700 more employes to check on subversives and to raise Director J. Edgar Hoover's salary from $16,000 to $20,000 a year were voted yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee.

It also voted authority to the Secretary of Commerce to fire employes regarded as security risks regardless of Civil Service regulations. This followed sharp criticism of the department by the committee for retaining 27 employes regarded as security risks not to be entrusted with confidential material.

Halt Ordered To Freeze at Marshall Hts.

House Unit to Block Funds for Section Unless NCPPC Ends Improvements Ban

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Under threat of withholding all operating funds, the House Appropriations Committee has directed the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to lift immediately the "freeze order" on Marshall Heights, it was learned yesterday.

The House demand, if followed as expected, virtually kills the three-year agitation for making the Southeast area target of the city's first large-scale slum clearance venture.

The "freeze," invoked by the District Commissioners last May 6, bars Marshall Heights home owners from improving their property pending redevelopment of the area.

Under the District Redevelopment Act of 1945, NCPPC has sole authority to rescind the "freeze" order, and may do so only when the project is "abandoned."

The House edict, carried in the committee report to the House yesterday on the Federal omnibus appropriations bill, also is expected to stir downtown housing officials to more active consideration of alternate slum clearance sites to be financed under the National Housing Act of 1949.

Earlier Recommendation

Recalling an earlier recommendation that the "freeze" be rescinded, the House Appropriations Committee report commented:

"This recommendation was not followed, however, by either the District Commissioners or the NCPPC. The blame for this situation has been laid at the door of the latter in testimony before both the House and Senate committees.

"The subcommittee in charge of this activity seriously considered a restriction on the expenditure of any money from the NCPPC budget until the freeze order was lifted. However, the committee hesitates to place a limitation on funds, some of which are unrelated to the question at hand.

"The committee trusts the situation will be corrected immediately, and that the residents of Marshall Heights will be given the services and rights to which they are legally and morally entitled and that the District officials will remove this discrimination against a Spectacular Two-Alarm Blaze Draws Thousands to 20th St.

One fireman was overcome at a spectacular two-alarm fire of unknown origin that damaged the Capital Towel Service Co., 1111 to 1117 20th st. nw. last evening.

Flames leaped 50 feet into the air in the early stages, fed by thousands of dollars worth of paper towels, and accompanied by dense clouds of smoke.

Thousands of spectators were attracted to the area, and 25 motorcycle patrolmen and several cruisers were detailed to handle traffic and the crowd.

Eighteen pieces of fire equipment fought the tricky blaze, restricted largely to the rear of the two-story brick building.

The firm handles chiefly towel supplies on a rental basis. It also operates under the name of Fowler Towel Service Co., the Scott Tissue Towel Service of Washington and the Baby Valet diaper service.

Battle Opens On Abolishing NLRB Counsel

By Sam Stavisky

Champions of the Taft-Hartley management-labor relations act yesterday launched a strong, two-pronged attack on President Truman's Reorganization Plan No. 12.

The plan, effective in 60 days unless specifically rejected by either chamber of Congress, would abolish the independent office of the general counsel to the National Labor Relations Board and transfer its powers and functions to the board and its chairman.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), co-author of the labor relations law, and Representative Ralph E. Church (R., Ill.), a staunch advocate of the law, attacked the President's reorganiza-

3 Million Petition Congress For Economy in Government

Several hundred of the country's young and coming business leaders yesterday climaxed a 1950 "Operation Economy" drive in a march on the Capitol.

They were members of Junior Chambers of Commerce from throughout the Nation, asking for Government reorganization along the lines of the Hoover Commission report.

Their spokesman, Clifford Cooper, Alhambra, Calif., president of the U. S. Junior Chamber, presented Congressional leaders with petitions signed by three million people "from the grass roots of the country," as he said on the Capitol steps.

Participating in the ceremony was a bipartisan group including Vice President Alben W. Barkley, Joseph W. Martin, House minority leader; John W. McCormack, House majority whip; Francis Myers, Senate majority whip, Congressional committee chairmen and others.

Cooper told them that 180,000 "Jaycees"—all of whom are between the ages of 21 and 35—had shown by collecting the three million signatures in 1800 communities that Americans are vitally interested in the efficient operation of their Government.

"This is not a protest demonstration," explained Harry W. Cooke, 34, president of the Kentucky Junior Chamber of Commerce, who agreed he was probably a typical Jaycee president.

"We're not fussing about expenditures for defense or for foreign policy, even though they are pretty big," said Cooke.

"We're more interested in cutting out these expensive Government treatises on the home life of North American fleas, or the sex life of the watermelon, and in saving a few million dollars by having the Army and Navy standardize their underwear."

Cooke, a home owner in his adopted city of Harrodsburg, Ky., served in the Army—from private to captain—and pointed out that 85 percent of his fellow Jaycees are veterans.

Wilfred Jossy, 34, district superintendent of the Bend-Portland Truck Service of Bend, Oreg., who represented the Oregon Jaycees, mentioned his children first.

"I have two boys, 5 and 9 years old," he said, "and when they're my age, I want them to have the opportunity to work for themselves and not for the Government. You might say that is my No. 1 ambition. That's why I'm here."

Another Jaycee who marched from 12th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. to the Capitol to bolster the nonpartisan Jaycee cause was Carlton Hawthorne of 1548 N. Jefferson st., Arlington, Va., president of the Jaycees there. He is a builder.

"As a young businessman," he said, "I know we can't continue to spend without some day balancing the budget. The debts being incurred right now cannot possibly be paid by our own generation. It seems unfair to pass them on to the next, and we've got to make a start on it sometime."

ECA Funds Approved by Senate Unit

Full Amount Voted; $100 Millions for Korea; Aid Available For Formosa, Hainan

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee went down the line for the Administration yesterday by approving the full amount sought for the third year of the Marshall Plan.

The committee voted unanimously to authorize $2,950,000,000 for the next fiscal year, plus 150 million left over from this year's spending for European recovery.

It also approved 100 million for recovery in Korea, and decided to let the Administration use another 100 million of unspent China funds during the coming year on the Nationalist-held islands of Formosa and Hainan and elsewhere "in the general area of China."

This gave the Administration a fund to use, at the President's discretion, for economic aid to the Communist-threatened states of Indo-China or other areas in southeast Asia.

Up to Truman

The Senate bill specified only that at least 50 million dollars of the unspent funds be used in Formosa and Hainan "so far as the President deems it practicable"—in other words, as long as these islands stay out of Communist control.

The committee not only gave the Economic Cooperation Administration every cent it asked, but also left Administrator Paul Hoffman free of legal restrictions that would hamper or cripple his work. It approved three important amendments which were statements of Congressional wishes rather than binding legal obligations.

One of them, offered by Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), was aimed at the recent British curb on imports of oil from American companies. The amendment said "It is the sense of Congress" that no country getting Marshall Plan aid should impose restrictions which discriminated against American citizens or companies.

Connally's language excepted only those restrictions "reasonably required" to meet balance of payments conditions or national security requirements, or those authorized under international agreements with the United States.

Offsetting the Connally amendment to some extent was one by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr.

McCarthy Names 'Top Soviet Agent'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) yesterday gave a closed meeting of a Senate subcommittee the name of the man he alleges is "the top Soviet espionage agent" in this country. He said he is "now connected with the State Department."

McCarthy previously had told reporters that the individual was the one-time boss of Alger Hiss "in the espionage ring in the State Department." He said he is one of the persons whose names he had already given the subcommittee.

After yesterday's meeting of the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee investigating McCarthy's charges of Communist infiltration, its chairman, Senator Tydings (D., Md.), said McCarthy offered no "primary evidence" to support his charges. But, Tydings said he gave the committee suggestions on where he believed it could be obtained.

Tydings explained that McCarthy did not supply evidence in the form of "a document or a circumstance." He added that the Wisconsin Senator's suggestions as to sources of evidence were "more or less in line" with those he had made in previous cases.

This was interpreted by newsmen to mean only that McCarthy proposed that Tydings' subcommittee search pertinent files—those of the State Department, FBI, Civil Service, Loyalty Review Board, etc.

By agreement between McCarthy and the subcommittee, the individual's name will not be publicly disclosed for the time being. Tydings said if investigation proved that the charge was unfounded, the matter will end there. If, on

'What World Needs,' He Says; Asks Fast Action

Sees Cold War as Threat; 'Encouraged' By New Attitude of U. S. and Russia

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

"What we need, what the world needs, is a 20-year program to win peace through the United Nations," Trygve Lie, the organization's secretary-general, declared here last night.

Making it plain that the American-Russian cold war is a threat to world peace, Lie urged that the first steps of his program be taken "without delay."

In his first public address in the Nation's Capital, Lie declared:

"I have been encouraged by the recent reaffirmations from the two leading great powers—the United States and the Soviet Union—about the possibilities of peaceful coexistence between them and between the different economic and political systems they represent."

Foundation of U. N.

The big-framed Norwegian reminded, "The United Nations was founded upon that belief and the hope of world peace depends upon its validity." The path for such a program will not be easy, he commented.

"I do not believe in political miracles. It will take a long series of steps to reduce the tension of the conflict and bring the great powers together," he predicted. Then he added:

"I do not think the world can safely delay taking the first steps on this road of negotiation and conciliation. The danger of an indefinite continuation of the cold war in this age of the atom bomb, the hydrogen bomb and bacteriological weapons is too great."

Sounds Note of Caution

Then he cautioned: "I want to make certain that I am not misunderstood when I speak of negotiation among the great powers. I do not mean by negotiation, surrender or appeasement by either side. I mean negotiation—which requires honest give-and-take by both sides."

Lie disclosed his plan before 1000 delegates and guests at the triennial convention of the B'nai B'rith, largest and oldest Jewish organization in America. The speech was at a banquet in the Statler Hotel, climaxing four days of convention sessions.

In the audience were several members of the Cabinet, and of Congress, as well as foreign diplomats. Vice President Alben W. Barkley also addressed the gathering.

The U. N. official praised B'nai B'rith as "an organization that is working for better human relations, and is helping to make the community a better place in which to live." He said the U. N. was

Maryland Man Seized in Death Of 3 in Crash

Wayne C. Hess, 23, Presley la., East Riverdale, Md., was arrested yesterday as a hit-and-run driver in a Pennsylvania crash that cost the lives of three students.

Maryland State Police made the arrest for Pennsylvania police, who said they traced Hess through pieces of his car.

The bodies of the Dickinson College students killed in the crash at Hanover, Pa., Sunday morning were not found for eight hours. Their car plunged off the road and fell 160 feet to the bottom of a quarry.

The victims, en route back to Carlisle, Pa., from Baltimore, were William T. Long, jr., 19, Westfield, N. J.; Hugh A. Lawhead, jr., 21, Hyde, Pa., and Thomas H. Cornell, 22, Lockhaven, Pa.

Hess, employed by a Hyattsville painting contractor, waived extradition yesterday at Ellicott City, and was taken to Gettysburg, Pa., where he was charged with failing to stop and reveal his identity at the scene of an accident. He will have a hearing today.

Freedmen's Chided at Capitol On Juggling Budget Figures

A charge that Freedmen's Hospital officials juggled their budget figures was made yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee.

The charge was contained in the committee's report on the Federal omnibus appropriation bill for the fiscal year starting next July 1. The report was made public as the bill went to the House.

In another action the committee decreed the Federal Government should pay $60,000 less and the District Government $60,000 more for expenses of vocational rehabilitation in the District.

3 Hotel 2400 Maids Nabbed As Takers of Numbers Bets

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

Vice squad detectives yesterday arrested three hotel maids who, they say, peddled numbers plays between changes of bedlinen.

Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the vice squad, said he received a complaint that numbers bets were being taken in the basement of the Hotel 2400, at 2400 16th st. nw.

Yesterday, at 12:45 p. m., two of Blick's detectives (they are always nameless) were roaming through the basement corridors of the hotel, keeping an eye peeled for gambling operations.

As they passed one room they heard a woman's voice say: "I want to place 25 cents on that number."

They had no warrant, but figured they had heard enough to merit a peek into the room.

They peeked. About 20 maids were in the room. Three of the maids, they reported, were seated at a table, pencils in hand and numbers slips in front of them.

These three, they said, made frantic efforts to put the numbers slips under their aprons. The police account did not relate how the detectives countered this maneuver.

Charged with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips were Bessie T. West, 50, of 2309 Ontario rd. nw.; Edna F. Hunter, 60, of 1927 13th st. nw., and Betty J. Witcher, 45, of 50 E st. nw. They were freed in $1500 bond each for appearance in Municipal Court today.

Republican Fight on Acheson Joined by Gabrielson, Wherry

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Guy George Gabrielson, chairman of the Republican National Committee, last night joined in the attack on Secretary of State Acheson. He thereby strengthened the belief that the GOP intends to make Acheson a target in the 1950 political campaign.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, speaking from the same platform as Gabrielson at Lincoln, Neb., said that Acheson was a "bad security risk" and "must go."

Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) had said pretty much the same thing earlier in charging that the State Department was infested by Communists.

Chairman Gabrielson did not mention McCarthy by name. He did say, however, that "stalwart Republican" members of Congress were showing in day-by-day investigations that "spies, emissaries, agents and members of the Communist Party . . . infest the Government of the United States."

Gabrielson said that Acheson rose to the defense of Alger Hiss, former State Department official, who now is under sentence of five years in prison on a perjury charge for denying he gave secret documents to an alleged Communist spy ring.

"Yet," said Gabrielson, "Mr.

House Unit Orders $2,475,000 For Marine Homes at Quantico

Quantico-based Marines yesterday gained another foothold in their battle for decent housing.

The House Armed Services Committee unanimously approved an amendment which would earmark $2,475,000 for living quarters at the nearby Virginia town.

The amendment was tacked to the multi-million dollar Senate military public works bill. The bill as now written calls for 150 new family units at Quantico where some Marines are living in chicken-coop type housing.

Prior to the committee vote on the Quantico amendment, Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.) told the group he didn't often agree with The Washington Post, "but I have to read it anyway. However, I want the record to show it was The Post which kicked into the open the Quantico situation."

Whereupon, Leon H. Gavin (R., Pa.) reminded Vinson that it was he who brought the newspaper story to the committee's attention.

On February 6, The Post carried a first-hand story about the deplorable conditions at Quantico—some Marines living in houses without running water, in apartments with broken windows and in dilapidated trailers.

Conditions there had led Comdr. James Davis, USN, base public works officer, to say: "The town of Quantico is the scab on the fair face of Virginia."

The House Armed Services Committee expects to report the 670-million-dollar military construction measure to the House floor Friday.

Up to Truman Now

Senate Votes Rent Control Leave Pay

The Senate approved yesterday a composite 709-million-dollar emergency money bill carrying a sharp cutback in the funds requested by Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods to run the rent control program.

The measure now goes to President Truman's Key West, Fla., vacation spot for his signature. The House had approved the bill previously.

It gives Woods only four million dollars to administer rent controls until next June, when the present law is scheduled to expire. Of the total, $2,600,000 is earmarked for severance pay to discharged employes. That leaves only $1,400,000 for actual operating costs.

Woods had asked for some severance pay funds plus $3,600,000 in cash operating funds.

While key legislators in both the House and Senate have voiced doubt that rent controls will be extended, at least in their present form, they have emphasized that the action on rent control funds has no bearing on the final decision reached by Congress.

The chairmen of both the House and Senate Banking Committees have promised complete hearings on Administration-supported bills to continue the present rent control law another year.

The money bill approved by the Senate was worked out by a joint Senate-House Conference Committee. Among other things, the group erased an item of $630,000 for the San Luis Valley reclamation project and $245,000 for the Lewiston orchards project in Idaho.

The Justice Department opposed any immediate action on new Communist control laws yesterday and said proposed bills before Congress may prove unconstitutional.

Assistant Attorney General Peyton Ford wrote Chairman John S. Wood, (D., Ga.), of the House Un-American Activities Committee that two bills before the committee proposing strict new curbs on Communist activities may be "premature."

Nevertheless, Wood promised early action on the bills and said he expects both to reach the House floor "before Easter."

The committee opened hearings on the two anti-subversive measures yesterday. Dr. Emerson P. Schmidt, the United States Chamber of Commerce's anti-Communist director, was the only witness.

Schmidt indorsed the bills, in principle, and said socialism might be a "mere prelude to Communism."

One bill, introduced by Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), would provide heavy fines and prison terms for anyone who conspires to set up a Communist dictatorship in the United States.

The Senate Judiciary Committee on March 1 approved an identical bill, authored by Senator Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.). A Mundt-Nixon Communist control bill passed the House in the 80th Congress but died in the Senate.

The second bill, sponsored by Wood, would make it unlawful for Federal employes or employes of national defense projects to belong to any subversive organization.

In his letter to Wood, Ford said the lawmakers should await the outcome of appeals by 11 Communist leaders for advocating the violent overthrow of the Government, before taking steps to write new legislation. Court rulings on those cases, he suggested, may determine whether present laws are adequate.

the other hand, it is substantiated, the name will be disclosed at the "proper time."

Tydings said that since McCarthy considered this the most important of the cases he had brought before the subcommittee, it will be given priority investigation.

McCarthy has insisted that this case can serve as a "showdown." He told this reporter it was "the perfect case to clear the air."

"If the files show that I'm wrong on this case," McCarthy continued, "then I will be considered a discredited witness. If they show I'm right, then perhaps the committee will have more confidence in what I say."

McCarthy Declines to Identify

McCarthy declined to say whether the person charged was one of the nine individuals he has mentioned before Tydings group by name, or one of his original "81 cases," the names connected with which he has handed Tydings privately and which have not been disclosed.

McCarthy made the initial charge that one of the names he gave Tydings was the "top espionage agent" in talking to reporters Monday evening.

Tydings said yesterday that on seeing press reports of the interview, he acted as soon as possible to convene his subcommittee and take McCarthy's testimony.

Tydings is still in an uncertain position on how to proceed with this and the rest of the investigations. He said he had not yet received word from the State Department how—or even whether—the loyalty files would be made available to his committee and staff.

The State Department appears willing, he said, but is still trying to work out a procedure that will afford proper safeguards.

Opinions of Advisers Vary

But, it was learned, there is a deep difference of opinion among the President's advisers on whether the files should be made available in any way.

Some feel that giving the files to Tydings will effectively disprove McCarthy's charges and thus end a political issue that is growing hotter by the moment. And they think there may be ways of doing this without creating an unfortunate precedent.

The group taking the opposite opinion feels there is no way to permit members of Congress seeing the loyalty files without establishing a pattern that will Plague Presidents forever after.

As of yesterday, it was indicated, President Truman, at Key West, had not yet made a decision.

Tydings pointed out that he understands FBI director J. Edgar Hoover has "grave reservations" about permitting his files to be opened to a congressional committee, and that Seth W. Richardson, chairman of the Loyalty Review Board, is vehemently opposed to the idea.

As Substitute

Robertson Plans Bank Holding Bill

By The Associated Press

Senator Robertson (D., Va.) said yesterday he will offer a substitute for a bank holding company bill which he introduced at the request of the Federal Reserve Board.

Robertson disclosed this at a Senate Banking Subcommittee hearing at which the measure was criticized by Preston Delano, Comptroller of the Currency.

Delano indicated, under questioning, that Secretary of Treasury Snyder shares his objections to the Reserve Board's recommendations for tightening regulation of bank holding companies.

Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) said Delano seemed "tc damn the bill with faint praise."

Robertson differed—he said he thought changes proposed by the comptroller were aimed at further restrictions.

He said so many amendments appear necessary he will draft a substitute.

Delano said the bill is too sweeping and vests too much discretion in the Reserve Board. He suggested the objectives could be met by strengthening existing law.

"Insofar as I know, he testified, "the bank holding companies needing some regulatory authority and restraints are comparatively few and generally fall within the definition of holding company affiliates under existing law.

He said the bill fails to set definite standards to guide the board in regulating the expansion of bank holding companies by acquiring additional banks or branches.

He said "Congress should not leave a problem of this magnitude entirely to the judgment of a single Federal agency.

He indorsed "complete severance of bank holding companies from their nonbanking interests," within a reasonable time. But he said the bill allows several exceptions that weaken this provision.

Delano suggested it would be well to distribute the proposed regulatory responsibilities among the three bank supervisory agencies—the Reserve System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Comptroller of the Currency.

Prince Georges Hearing Set On Zone Plea

Public hearing on a petition for semi-detached dwelling zoning for a 100-acre tract at Riggs and Ager rds. near Hyattsville will be held at 11 a. m. Tuesday at Upper Marlboro by the Prince Georges County Commissioners.

M. A. Mace, owner, through his attorney, T. Howard Duckett, has petitioned for commercial classification of the two sides of the intersection with the remainder of the tract to be used for the semi-detached houses. The northwest corner now is occupied by a golf driving range.

The tract is bounded roughly by the Riggs rd., Sargent rd. and New Hampshire ave. and by the communities of Green Meadows, Riggs Manor apartments, Lewisdale, Carole Highlands, Chillum Manor and Takoma Park. Citizen opposition to the change is expected.

To Meet Again Today

Application of Walter L. Green and LeRoy Pumphrey for apartment zoning at 64th st. adjoining Maryland Park High School also will be held at the same meeting.

The County Commissioners will meet again today to discuss details of the county budget. The meeting will be in executive session. Date for the public hearing on the budget may be announced.

The commissioners yesterday approved transfer of $1027 to the town of Morningside as its share of racing revenue for 1949. The town was incorporated in 1949 and heretofore had not been included.

Library Tax Rise Asked

Increase of ½ cent in the county library tax to permit purchase of needed books and replacement of worn volumes was asked in a letter from the Prince Georges Memorial Library Association of which Mrs. Helen C. Ditman is president. The present rate is two cents.

The commissioners yesterday granted light commercial zoning for a 6-acre tract on Ager rd., south of Riggs rd., Green Meadows for a gasoline filling station to Sidney B. and Celia C. Lust.

The officials also accepted an invitation to participate in the dedication of the new county fire radio system April 1 at Hillside Fire House. A parade will leave the County Service Building at 2 p. m. and proceed to the fire house for the ceremonies.

Council Acts To Get Land For Office

The Montgomery County Council yesterday took steps to secure additional land for the proposed $700,000 county office building in Rockville.

The council adopted a resolution asking the Board of Education to deed over title to the Welsh Athletic Field on Jefferson st. The county now has an option to buy an adjoining one-acre tract at Perry and Jefferson sts. from the heirs of Mrs. Mary Peter. Purchase price for the land would be about $80,000.

Only a portion of the athletic field, now used by Richard Montgomery High School, would be required for the building itself, County Manager Irving G. McNayr said. The remainer would be used for a parking lot.

The Council, at yesterday's meeting, referred proposals from the Silver Spring Board of Trade for street improvement in the business district there to McNayr for study.

These included improving Cameron st. between Georgia ave. and Fenton st.; Spring st. between Georgia ave. and the public parking lot, and Fenton st. between Sligo ave. and Pershing dr. A request was also made for extension of Fenton st. north about 1500 feet to connect with Woodland dr.

Capitol Move To Cut Sesqui Funds Balked

Representative Gordon Canfield (R., N. J.) yesterday lost the first round in a drive to put back into the Federal Treasury some two million dollars of the three-million-dollars in Federal funds Congress voted last year for the National Capital Sesquicentennial Celebration.

Canfield asked the House Appropriations Committee to write an order into the omnibus appropriation bill for recapture of the Sesqui funds that have not yet been spent or obligated. Sesqui officials estimated this would mean abount two million dollars.

The Canfield motion was ruled out by Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.). Canfield said the ruling was to the effect that since there were no funds for the Sesqui in the bill, his proposal was not germane to the measure.

Canfield said he will try again next week, when the House takes up the money bill, to get approval of his plans for rescinding the unspent Sesqui funds.

He said he feels the money could be better spent for the Coast Guard reserves and for hiring additional Internal Revenue Bureau employes.

$800,000 Public Parking Lot Program Planned in Bethesda

An $800,000 public parking lot program for the Bethesda business district has been advanced by the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber voted Monday night to request the Montgomery County Council to authorize such a program, to be financed through a bond issue.

Its proposal would provide funds for retiring the bonds through a business property tax. The tax would be levied against improved business property at 40 cents per $100 valuation, against unimproved business property at 20 cents, and against tangible personal property in commercial establishments at 40 cents.

Commercial and industrial property in the district would be exempt from the tax if adequate parking facilities are provided by the occupants. Partial exemptions would be accorded properties providing at least 25 percent of needed parking space.

The commercial section of Bethesda would be enlarged under the proposal to take in the Woodmont triangle and a large part of the section lying west of Pearl st., north of the railroad tracks and south of East-West hwy.

Ching Warns Of Strike on Hiring Halls

By the United Press

Federal Mediation Director Cyrus S. Ching warned Congress yesterday there probably will be a Nation-wide shipping strike unless the big maritime unions are allowed to keep their hiring hall system.

He wrote a Senate Labor subcommittee the unions consider the hiring halls "essential and indispensable" to their survival and that employers regard "well run" halls as essential or significantly important for industrial stability.

The Supreme Court has ruled that the Great Lakes hiring hall system, after which most others are patterned, is illegal under the Taft-Hartley law. Its decision upheld a ruling by the National Labor Relations Board.

12-Hour Strike Called Throughout Italy

Rome, March 21 (AP).—The Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor tonight called for a 12-hour general strike throughout Italy for Wednesday.

The nation has been experiencing sporadic walkouts in industrial areas and peasant invasions of large estates. Conservative newspapers have described these incidents as the Moscow-directed Cominform's "spring offensive" in Italy.

The nation-wide strike call came after two workers were reported killed in a clash with police in the central Italian town of Lentella. Dispatches said a crowd of demonstrators defied police orders to disband. Police then opened fire, killing two and wounding 10.

Wednesday's walkout is scheduled to start at 6 a. m. (midnight Tuesday EST) and end at 6 p. m. Labor confederation leaders met in extraordinary session tonight to decide what groups of workers, if any, will be exempt.

OAS Rivalry With U. N. on Aid Revealed

By The Associated Press

A previously veiled conflict between the United Nations and the Organization of American States (OAS) over technical aid programs for Latin America broke into the open yesterday.

Representatives of Uruguay and Colombia clashed at a committee meeting held in connection with a special session of the OAS's Inter-American Economic and Social Council. The OAS is the central organization of 21 American Republics with headquarters here.

The dispute followed a speech by Willard Thorp, United States Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, in which he outlined principles for operation of an OAS aid plan in Latin America.

Thorp made only a passing reference to the United Nations, recalling that its economic and social council has made many studies of such assistance programs.

Uruguayan Delegate Juan Felipe Yriart told the committee there should be collaboration in any technical aid programs, and said there is room for both the U. N. and OAS to take part in such projects in Latin America.

Colombian Delegate Jorge Mejia Palacios replied that the committee should decide whether the OAS should or can do a particular program without being concerned over its relationship with the U. N.

In the background is a long rivalry between the two organizations, particularly between the OAS and the U. N.'s economic commission for Latin America.

The United States and a number of Latin American countries sought unsuccessfully to prevent creation of the commission in the U. N. although the United States has since participated in its meetings.

Tariffs Need Further Cuts, Webb Asserts

New York, March 21 (AP).—Undersecretary of State James E. Webb said tonight American tariffs need to be trimmed further as part of an effort to promote and stabilize world trade.

Though international agreements have brought the average tariff on dutiable imports to the lowest point in American history, "We still have a lot of pretty high rates," he declared.

Reducing these in order to spur imports is among the "short run" measures Webb said should be taken to close the dollar gap in postwar trade. In an address prepared for the Export Managers Club he said major "long-run" steps already are being taken or are pending, beginning with the Marshall Plan for European aid.

Without suggesting specific reductions he noted:

"The ad valorem duty on surgical needles is 40 percent. On Victrola needles, it is 54.9 percent. If you want to import imitation pearls, you would have to pay 60 percent on them. On most kinds of kitchen utensils you would pay 40 percent, and on some kinds of artificial flowers, you would pay 71 percent. On wool blankets the rate is 60.8 percent. On cigarettes it is 104.4 percent."

Reds Forbid Evacuation At Shanghai

Hongkong, March 21 (U.P.)—China's Communists refused finally today to permit the removal of some 2000 Americans and other foreigners from bomb-pocked, blockaded Shanghai.

The rescue ship General Gordon, which had been waiting here for days, sailed empty tonight for Yokohama, Japan.

If the Reds had agreed, the Gordon would have anchored off the mouth of the Yangtze River while landing craft sailed up the reportedly mined approaches to Shanghai to bring out the refugees.

Reports that Russian soldiers are pouring into Red China by the thousands created belief in some quarters that the Reds had forbidden the Shanghai evacuation in hopes of keeping the Soviet influx secret.

Reports from a number of sources indicated that 5000 to 10,000 Russian troops had arrived in Communist China during the past month to bolster air defenses.

The Hongkong Standard, quoting a Chinese businessman recently returned from Red-held territory, reported that 2000 Russian troops are helping native Communists to man antiaircraft guns in Shanghai.

2 Veteran Airline Pilots Tell Of 'Saucer' Over Arkansas

By Capt. Jack Adams and First Officer G. W. Anderson
Chicago and Southern Airlines Pilots
As Told to United Press

Memphis, Tenn., March 21—We firmly believe that the "flying saucer" we saw over Arkansas Monday night was a secret experimental type aircraft—not a visitor from outer space.

We are certain this was no meteor. It was an aircraft in controlled flight, traveling at a terrific speed. It was not a jet plane.

The strangest, strongest blue-white light we've ever seen blinked very rapidly on top of the object.

We were headed for Little Rock, about 15 miles north of Stuttgart, Ark. Visibility and ceiling were unlimited and we could see 20 or 30 miles. We were flying at 2000 feet.

Suddenly, Jack saw this intense blinking light at our left. It was about 1000 feet above us and about a half-mile away. It zoomed at terrific speed—500 to 600 miles an hour—in an arc ahead and above us moving from south to north.

"My God, what's that?" Jack exclaimed, nudging Andy. Andy looked and said, "Oh, no. Not one of those things!"

This object remained in full view for about 30 seconds and we got a good look. It had no navigation lights, but as it passed ahead of us in an arc we could plainly see other lights—as though from 8 to 10 lighted windows or ports—on the lower side.

The lights had a fluorescent quality. They were soft and fuzzy, unlike any we'd seen before. The object was circular and remained distinct all the time it was in our view. It approached and disappeared just like another aircraft. The time was exactly 9:20 p. m., CST.

We blinked our landing lights in a recognition signal. We didn't know what to make of it, but we almost immediately eliminated military or other civilian aircraft because none that we know of looked like this thing. It was about the size of a DC-3.

There was no reflection, no exhaust and no vapor trail. That's definite.

We know the Air Force has denied there is anything to this flying saucer business, but we're both experienced pilots and we're not easily fooled.

Fire Damages Towel Plant

ice would continue "unimpaired."

Deputy Fire Chief P. A. Davis said the fire started in a store room where trucks unload at an enclosed platform, spreading to the second floor, where it mushroomed.

Seventh Battalion Chief Alfred M. Grunwell was overcome by smoke, treated at the scene, and returned to duty.

Carroll C. Lillard, plant manager of 1724 Potomac ave. se., said damage was confined largely to sewing and stock rooms, and the cabinet shop.

Maybe Short Circuit

John G. Hartung, plant service manager, of 1240 Holbrook ter. ne., thought the fire would be traced to a short circuit. He said between $10,000 and $12,000 worth of paper towels in the store room were destroyed. Grinsfelder later called this estimate "fantastic."

Hartung said a fireproof door between the plant's boiler room and store room was shut when he left the plant at 5:45 p. m.

Alarms were turned in by Raymond Snead, 22, of 1609 D st. se., employed on an adjacent used car lot, and Robert Godbolt, 51, of 1919 L st. nw., an off-duty employe, who lives near the plant. First alarm was sounded at 7:52 p. m.; the second, at 8 p. m. The blaze was under control at 8:20 p. m.

U. S. Diplomats Swap Views In Rome Talks

Rome, March 21 (AP).—Five top American diplomats in western Europe and the United States Ambassador to Soviet Russia, Alan G. Kirk, gathered in Rome tonight for a fresh review of cold war and European recovery developments.

They planned to thresh out in a three-day conference such questions as:

1. What to do about the Berlin deadlock and the fate of Germany.
2. How to continue European economic recovery operations in the face of almost certain large reductions in ERP dollar aid.

George W. Perkins, United States Assistant Secretary of State in charge of European affairs, is here to lead the discussions. He said the tension and danger "have certainly not eased" since the first meeting of the Ambassadors in Paris last October.

But the western Ambassadors, as they arrived, spoke of some improvements. They expressed belief the North Atlantic Pact nations stood more closely allied and that communism had received additional setbacks west of the Elbe River.

The conference will start Wednesday.

Attending with Perkins will be Ambassador Kirk, James C. Dunn, Ambassador to Italy; Lewis W. Douglas, Ambassador to Britian; John J. McCloy, United States High Commissioner for Germany; David K. E. Bruce, Ambassador to France, and W. Averell Harriman, Marshall Plan Chief for Europe.

Bulgars Seize 26 in 'Plot,' Accuse Tito as Instigator

Sofia, March 21 (U.P.).—Bulgaria today accused Premier Marshal Tito and other Yugoslav leaders of plotting to overthrow the Bulgarian government by riots and rebellion.

An indictment said 20 Bulgarians and 6 Yugoslavs had been arrested in the biggest conspiracy roundup yet announced in Bulgaria.

(A Bulgarian propaganda broadcast yesterday apparently referring to the same arrests, named Winston Churchill's son, Randolph, and "United States Gen. Mark Layn" as instigators of the plot. Their names were not mentioned in the official indictment.)

The indictment directly accused Tito, his Interior Minister Gen. Alexander Rankovic, and the central committee of the Yugoslav Communist Party of leading the conspiracy.

Yugoslav police were accused of blackmailing immigrants' families to work against Bulgaria.

U. S. Gold Holdings Drop $370 Millions

Gold holdings of the United States Government have declined more than $370,000,000 in the six months since the foreign currency devaluations last September.

Officials here expressed belief yesterday that the chief cause for the withdrawals has been improvement in the balance of international accounts. This, they said, is taking the pressure off foreign countries to send gold here to pay for goods and enabling them to rebuild reserves with gold from this country.

A small percentage of the metal went into U. S. manufacture of jewelry, dental appliances, etc.

The decline in the gold stock since it reached the peak of $24,690,998,991 last September 21 has about cancelled out its rise in the six months preceding the devaluations.

Treasury records show the U. S. Government's holdings—still about three-fifths of the whole world's stock of gold for monetary use—are down to $24,320,000,000, about the same as at this point last year.

Before the devaluations, gold had been pouring in from foreign counrties without interruption, except in wartime, since the U. S. devalued the dollar on a gold basis in January, 1934.

Accompanying the outflow of U. S. gold recently has been a decline in premium prices paid for gold in such free markets as Paris.

While the U. S. official price for gold has held at $35 an ounce since 1934, prices in the free market at Paris have been up as high as $50. Recently they dropped a little below $42.

No direct connection is seen here, however, between the U. S. gold outflow and the gold price decline in the Paris market. The price decline has been held involved more directly with such things as:

Gold offerings by refugees from Communist-overrun China and from gold-mining South Africa, the latter in semi-processed form, and fear on thre part of French hoarders that the free market price would continue down, making it wise for them to sell before it did.

Trygve Lie Urges 20-Yr. U. N. Peace Program

working toward the same end throughout the world.

Although Lie did not spell out the details of his 20-year plan, he indicated the direction in pointing out what the United Nations can do about the cold war, to this effect:

1. United Nations programs of economic assistance and social welfare will help to reduce cold war tensions, provided such programs are carried out on a nonpolitical basis.

2. The United Nations has demonstrated its capacity for mediation and conciliation of bitter conflicts in Palestine, Indonesia and Kashmir.

3. The United Nations has been able to keep within peaceful bounds every other dispute between nations that has been brought before it.

The U. N. has failed, he admitted, to make progress in the past 2½ years "toward getting agreement on the control of atomic energy, reducing other armaments, and providing military forces to the Security Council to enforce its decisions."

One power of the U. N. lying dormant, Lie said, is the charter provision calling for special periodic meetings of the Security Council at which the members can be represented by the foreign ministers or even the heads of governments. These may be held twice a year, "but so far there have not been any," he declared.

"If such special meetings were to be held as a regular thing they should be devoted to a periodic review of outstanding issues before the United Nations, accompanied by quiet and private consultations on these issues among the foreign ministers," Lie stated.

One of the "great political issues" before the U. N. is the question of which government should represent China. Lie reaffirmed his view that the Communist government should receive the seat if inquiry shows it has "the power to employ the resources and direct the people of the state in fulfillment of the obligations of membership in the United Nations."

"I repeat — whatever government is thus qualified, regardless of its ideology" he said.

He said he did not urge settlement of the representation question because the Soviet Union had left the meetings. "I have never thought walking out of meetings and staying away from meetings was a good way to settle differences of opinion," he added.

His real interest is in how to achieve representation for the 450 million people of China—the largest nation in the world and in the U.N. in terms of population alone, he stated.

Praise From Barkley

Vice President Barkley praised Lie's address as a "level-headed, fair and calm recital" of U.N.'s accomplishments and possibilities.

He said that the peoples of the world—"those who draw the water and hew the wood . . . if they could speak with one voice . . . they would want the nations of the world to sit down at the council table, now represented by the U.N., and settle their differences —and not by the sword."

The Vice President warned that "if the U.N. fails as the League of Nations failed, it is difficult to predict the fate of man. It is difficult to predict that another international organization will arise."

"I have faith in it," Barkley emphasized, speaking of the U.N.

He praised Eddie Jacobson, Kansas City former business associate and wartime buddy of President Truman, and the organization for efforts "in the great cause of brotherhood."

Earlier, the convention adopted a resolution urging home rule for the District, condemning segregation here and asking that it be removed as soon as practicable, and another urging the Senate to ratify promptly the genocide convention now before it. The convention outlaws the extermination of a people because of their race or creed.

The meeting will end today with election of officers.

Full Sum Asked for ECA Wins Senate Committee Approval

(R., Mass.) calling upon the Marshall Plan countries to cut their dollar imports to the bone.

The Lodge amendment said it was American policy to "minimize the burden of the European Recovery Program on the American taxpayer by reducing the amount of dollar purchases by the participating countries to the greatest extent possible, consistent with maintaining an adequate supply of essentials for the functioning of their economies and for their continued recovery."

Finally, an amendment by Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) asked the Marshall Plan countries to use some of their so-called counterpart funds of local currencies to support the proposed new European Payments Union, under which the Europeans would be enabled to pay for one another's goods.

The Senate bill itself would earmark up to 600 million dollars of the third-year funds for supporting such a currency clearing-house. The Fulbright amendment, if approved by Congress, would also put European currencies into the pool.

Each country that has been getting free grants under the Marshall Plan has had to set aside an equivalent amount of its own currency, and can use these funds only with ECA consent. Fulbright originally proposed compelling the Marshall Plan countries to put half of their local currency accumulations into the pool.

But the amendment, as the committee modified and approved it, asked only that the Marshall Plan countries contribute only as much as "practicable"—the determination to be left, presumably, to Hoffman and the ECA.

The European currencies most in demand for intra-European payments today are those of Switzerland and Belgium, which get no ECA grants and therefore have no accumulations of counterpart funds. The countries with the biggest counterpart funds are Britain, France, Italy and Western Germany, and there is no shortage of these currencies in intra-European trade today.

Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) cast the only vote yesterday for his own amendment to slash the third-year authorization by 600 million dollars. Hickenlooper also failed in an attempt to write into the law an amendment protecting American businessmen in Morocco

Chairman Connally indicated to reporters that his committee would try in conference to kill the amendment approved Monday by the House Foreign Affairs Committee, cutting a billion dollars in cash from the Marshall Plan and substituting an equivalent amount of surplus farm commodities.

"We decided we'd let it come to conference and act on it then," said Connally. Earlier he had predicted that Congress would reject the House plan, which Hoffman described on Monday as a "strait jacket."

The House committee yesterday tacked a policy declaration onto its own foreign aid bill, favoring the organization of Asia's free peoples for mutual aid to protect their freedom.

Today the House group expects to finish work on its bill, which combines ECA, Korea, Point Four technical assistance and aid to Arab refugees into a single-package measure.

Support-Crop Booster Halted By Anderson

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A carefully prepared bill that would have increased this year's crops of price-support cotton and peanuts was halted in the Senate yesterday by an unexpected parliamentary maneuver.

Senateur Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.), former Secretary of Agriculture, succeeded in sending the measure back to a Senate-House conference committee. The bill already had passed the House and needed only a favorable Senate vote before going to the White House.

Anderson has opposed the bill from the start. He stopped action on it on a point of order. He pointed out the conference committee had inserted a provision that was not in either measure originally approved by the House and Senate.

This provision was put in at the insistence of Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., N. Mex.) of the Senate Agriculture Committee, one of the Senate conferees. It provided that up to 50,000 acres originally planted to wheat could be changed to cotton this year in areas where wheat has been damaged by green bug infestation.

The action may result in knocking out the bill. It was agreed upon by the conference group only after 11 days of heated debate, and then only by a one-vote margin. The "green bug provision" was allegedly put in to win Thomas' vote at the last minute.

After the action Anderson admitted that the bill might be in danger. Besides the "green bug" provision, the bill would have allowed an increase in cotton planting of about 800,000 acres and an unlimited increase in peanuts. It might have increased the price support burden this year 100 million dollars.

Anderson was particularly opposed to the "green bug" section and the increase in peanuts. He was, however, in favor of a provision that would have stopped all price supports for potatoes next year unless strict planting and marketing rules are adopted.

"I don't think we ought to have to pay such a price for the potato restrictions," he remarked.

Florida Potato Grower Opposes Crop Supports

Found—a potato grower who doesn't want price supports!

La Monte Graw, secretary of the Florida Potato Council, said his entire group agrees with him.

Florida potato men last year raised 5,428,000 bushels of potatoes, against only 3,745,000 the year before. Early spring sales of Florida spuds have cut into sales of the late potatoes grown in Maine, Long Island and other northern points.

Graw appeared before a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee to oppose a bill to put strict Government-enforced acreage and marketing restrictions on spuds.

Slashed Funds Bill Faces Floor Fight to Compel Further Savings by Truman

Departments Are Criticized On Spending

Both the Agriculture and Interior Departments were warned by the House Appropriations Committee yesterday about the way they spend Uncle Sam's money.

The committee, although unusually lenient towards requests of both departments, offered these criticisms:

1. Too much "overlapping and duplication" was evident in Agriculture, particularly in conducting its various soil saving programs. Part of the conservation activities is handled by the Soil Conservation Service and part by the Production and Marketing Administration, both agencies in the department.

2. Lack of "candor" on the part of Interior officials. The committee took exception to a request for $160,000 for a power line between Estes and Leyner on the Colorado-Big Thompson project in Colorado. The same thing was turned down last year when presented as an "Estes-Valmont" line, but the Reclamation Bureau didn't bother to point that out, the committee said.

The committee also urged Interior to treat Alaska Indians as Americans and not as "second-class citizens." It severely attacked a "policy of placing Alaska Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts on reservations" as "devoid of merit, retrogressive, unnecessary and indefensible."

The subcommittee on agriculture was equally severe in criticising the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine. An investigation, it said, disclosed "a complete lack of advance planning of programs, a serious deficiency in control over and utilization of vehicles and other property, extremely inefficient utilization of manpower, and other serious deficiencies."

The committee, however, recommended $1,284,382,000 to run the Agriculture Department's widespread activities—exclusive of the multimillion-dollar price supports, for the fiscal year 1951 beginning July 1. This is 50 million more than last year, but 132 million less than the department wanted. Of this 764 million were in direct appropriations, and 520 million in borrowing authority for the Rural Electrification Administration's program for farm electricity and telephones.

Price supports are financed by the department's Commodity Credit Corporation, a Government corporation. CCC is asking an additional two billion dollars in funds to carry on its price programs. It already had four billion invested in surplus commodities out of its present 4750 million borrowing capacity.

3. Tightened restrictions on transfer of Federal funds between agencies to encourage return of larger unspent balances to the Treasury.

"Legislative Riders"

Some of these restrictions plainly constituted "legislative riders" on an appropriation bill, and as such may be knocked out on points of order when the bill reaches the House floor.

The committee's cash cut in appropriations was deeper than the estimated expenditure slash, totaling $1,385,377,504 for the agencies affected. This is because many types of appropriations cover more than the fiscal year spending period.

Actual appropriations in the bill thus totaled $27,266,403,664, against $28,651,781,168 requested by the President.

In addition, Government agencies were authorized to enter into contracts totalling $1,778,626,500, compared with the $1,961,149,500 in contract authority requested.

Nearly every agency covered in the bill was affected by the cuts, which averaged out to around 5 percent.

Other Costs Not in Bill

Not included in the first omnibus appropriation bill in modern times were some $11,592,751,053 in appropriations for Marshall plan aid to Europe, military assistance for friendly countries, and so-called permanent and indefinite appropriations, including interest on the debt. These will either be added in the Senate or handled in separate appropriation measures.

Largest single item in the bill, but one of the lightest cut proportionately, were Defense Department military functions. The committee approved $13,025,000,000 for defense, or $202,817,700 under estimates.

The department's civil functions, however, received a whopping cutback of about 25 percent, from $834,867,500 to $632,620,000, largely in flood control and other Corps of Engineers construction projects. The committee said this was chiefly because substantial funds are on hand, due to tardy enactment of the 1950 appropriation.

Even AEC is Cut

The Veterans' Administration, normally another untouchable, received $5,800,782,795, or $205,832,205 less than it asked. Even the Atomic Energy Commission was cut back a total of $95,330,000 in cash and contract authority. Instead of what it sought, AEC received $647,820,000 in cash and $300,150,000 in contract authority.

The committee gave the Bureau of Internal Revenue funds to hire 1000 additional tax enforcement agents. But it reduced the bureau's appropriations from the $253,008,000 requested to $245,608,000 and recommended "use of improved methods of handling its business." The bureau asked for nearly 3000 more enforcement officers.

The tight new antideficiency provision written into the bill requires apportionment of all types of funds by Government agencies over the entire year. District of Columbia funds would come under the same restriction.

Penalties for incurring unauthorized deficits or overspending allotments would be stepped up from $100 fine or one months' imprisonment to a maximum $5000 penalty or two years jail sentence, or both.

Apportionment of appropriations to avoid a deficit would be placed under the strict supervision of the Budget Bureau. Only exceptions to the antideficiency ban would be in cases where subsequent legislation required larger expenditures and emergencies involving the safety of human life, immediate welfare of individuals or protection of property.

Old Act "Antiquated"

The committee called the old antideficiency act "antiquated" and said that due to the complexities of Government it has become practically inoperative.

The committee read an economy lecture to Government officials.

"Every official of the Government who has responsibility for administration of a program must assume a portion of the burden for the deficit in the Federal Treasury," it said.

The flat ban on Government employes carrying forward annual leave applies directly to the present calendar year but the committee recommended (1) reenactment in succeeding years and (2) review by legislative committees of the "entire leave situation" with a view to preventing abuses.

Transfer of Funds Curbed

The toughened restriction on transfer of Federal funds between agencies provides that checks must be drawn in each case of a fund shift. The transferred funds would be subject to any legislative limitations placed on the original, nor could they be spent after the time limit provided in the original act.

At present there are many different ways of transferring Federal funds between agencies and the committee narrowed these to only one legal method.

The committee's attempt to substitute direct appropriations for future contract authorizations was in the form of a request to the Budget Bureau. Noting that it has become "general practice" to include contract authority in the budget, the committee said:

"This has resulted in committing the Federal Budget to substantial expenditures several years ahead. It is therefore the desire of the committee that the budget hereafter avoid the use of contract authorizations and submit requests for direct appropriations in lieu thereof."

Budget Too Involved

The committee also called on the Budget Bureau to further simplify the annual budget. It said the bureau's first "performance budget," stemming from the recommendations of the Hoover Commission, greatly improved the old form "but only the first steps have been taken."

"The fact is that it (the budget) has become so involved as to make ready analysis of the mass of detail presented difficult almost to the point of futility," said the committee report.

"Application of the performance budget theory . . . has served to clarify only the individual items of appropriation and has not touched upon the confusion and complexity in other phases of the budget which must be analyzed in order to appraise the fiscal difficulties.

"Simplification of the present budget document . . . should be undertaken by the bureau . . . as a project of first priority in . . . presentation of estimates for fiscal year 1952."

Many Agencies Scolded

Many another agency, from the President's office down, came in for some scolding, and the report even took a whack at organized drives for more economy.

The report said the House unit left "no stone unturned" to economize but that "various agencies and individuals" who sought deeper cuts hadn't been helpful at all. It said their proposals were "in such general terms as to be practically useless."

"It is a very simple matter to say in a speech that Government expenditures should be reduced by three to five billion dollars," the report said.

"But not a single witness appeared before the committee to suggest a program for reduction except in a few isolated cases where local interests opposed specific appropriations for local purposes."

Defending its report, the committee said military estimates had been more thoroughly screened than any defense budget since the war, but "it has been a discouraging and difficult task . . . Congress does not have the authority or the means at hand to operate the Department of Defense . . . The committee feels substantial reduction in the funds requested would cripple the national defense effort . . . For the present the Nation cannot safely make a further reduction . . . Undoubtedly we are taking certain very grave risks in not being prepared."

Some of the highlights of the bill:

Postoffice department. Granted $2,207,500,000 of the $2,235,607,000 request, but estimated a $401,500,000 operating deficit. Recommended the department economize by cutting down on the number of mail in city residential areas and by installing more mechanical devices.

Federal Security Agency. Granted $1,591,784,590 of the $1,635,083,600 requested. The agency's 150-million-dollar hospital construction program was cut in half.

Labor Department. Granted $208,573,100 of $220,014,700 request. Among the items cut back was the 188 million dollars estimate for employment security. This was reduced to $178,500,000, still $10,500,000 above unemployment funds for this year.

Agriculture Department. Granted $764,032,701 of the $806,278,446 requested. The full $83,500,000 sought for the school lunch program was provided. The department was authorized to pay the cost of shipping surplus commodities to areas which need them for food.

White House. Granted the full amount requested for the executive office of the President, except for a $30,000 cut in the $300,000 asked for the Council of Economic Advisers.

State Department. Granted $217,651,297 of $230,077,397 request. For international information and educational activities, including the "Voice of America," $34,000,000 was provided, a cut of $2,645,000. The committee stipulated that the cut not apply "in any respect" to the proposed program of radio broadcasting.

Committee Charges Truman 'Item Veto'

Area Projects

Flood Work Funds Take 25 Pct. Cut

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A cut of 25 percent in President Truman's recommendations for flood control and river and harbor projects during the 1951 fiscal year was voted yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee.

The committee, in the huge one-package appropriation bill reported to the House, recommended $600,945,000 for waterways work.

This compares with $798,482,000 which President Truman recommended in his budget—a cut of $197,537,000.

The total is $34,559,190 below actual appropriations for the current fiscal year.

The committee gave two reasons for trimming Mr. Truman's requests.

First, it said, the Army engineers virtually lost a construction season because last year's appropriation bill was not agreed on and passed by Congress until late in the year.

As a result, the committee report said, there are substantial unobligated balances in many of the project funds which can be carried over this year.

Because of this, said the committee, it is doubtful if the engineers could use all the funds they originally asked.

Second, it said, "is the conviction that the Nation would, in most instances, be better served if, wherever possible and economically feasible, construction activity be spread out."

It said this is especially true in view of the present high rate of unemployment.

For general flood control projects the committee approved a total of $341,055,000, compared with budget recommendations of $478,447,000.

For river and harbor work the committee approved $187,678,000, compared with the budget figure of $240,714,000.

Projcets for which the committee made recommendations include:

District of Columbia: Potomac River, north side Washington Channel, $75,000.

Ohio River, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia: Locks and dams, $450,000; open channel work, $200,000.

Maryland: Baltimore Harbor and channels, $500,000.

Pennsylvania: Monongahela River, Pennsylvania and West Virginia: Locks No. 2, Pa., $2,750,000; Morgantown Lock and Dam, W. Va., $1,500,000.

Virginia: Norfolk Harbor, $850,000; York Split Channel, $300,000.

West Virginia: Monongahela River (see Pa.), Ohio River (See Ill.).

Maryland: Cumberland, Md., and Ridegley, W. Va., $1,080,000; Savage River Reservoir, $950,000.

Virginia: Buggs Island Reservoir (N. C.) $27,000,000; Philpott Reservoir, $4,000,000.

West Virginia: Sutton Reservoir, $1,300,000; Cumberland and Ridgeley (see Md.).

Fear In Next Year

Besides criticizing the President for not spending all the air-power funds voted last year, the committee told the House that next year's military budget may be too small. Declaring that the need for economy and financial stability kept it from voting more money, the group said:

"Undoubtedly we are taking certain very grave risks in not being better prepared."

The committee recalled that Congress last year, after "much debate," voted funds for a 58 instead of a 48-group Air Force over the President's objections. Subsequently, Mr. Truman impounded the additional funds and held the Air Force to 48 groups.

"A major question of policy was determined by the Congress and funds were provided to implement the policy," said the committee, "but the will of Congress was circumvented . . .

Congress Seen Incapacitated

"If this principle of thwarting the will of Congress by impounding of funds should be accepted as correct, then Congress would be totally incapable of carrying out its constitutional mandate of providing for the defense of the Nation."

The committee pointed out that the proposed outlay for new aircraft procurement will not keep even the reduced-size Air Force modern.

If the present $1,350,000,000 expenditure is continued, it was said, by 1956, there will be only 42 first-line groups and 17 second-line groups (equipped with obsolescent planes) in both the regular Air Force and Air National Guard.

The "48-group program" includes 48 regular Air Force groups and 27 groups in the Guard and Air Reserve.

Army Cut Heaviest

The omnibus appropriation bill, sent to the House yesterday, provides a total of $14,781,376,000 for the defenses forces, compared to $14,984,161,000 proposed in the budget. This, however, includes both cash to pay off last year's contractual authority, as well as new contractual authority.

The more-realistic "new obligational authority" total includes $3,910,882,000 for the Army, $3,845,378,000 for the Navy, $4,389,516,000 for the Air Force and 358 million dollars for the Office of the Secretary of Defense.

Bulk of the committee cuts fell on the Army. The land arm was trimmed $107,510,700, with the Navy slashed $36,054,000 and the Air Force, $43,962,000.

Clothing Items Reduced

Most of the paring, except for 36.6 million slash for Army Ordnance, was applied to items like clothing, subsistence and other supplies in which the committee felt there would be a downward price trend.

The committee upped the appropriation for the Army Reserves by five million dollars to permit 100 percent drill attendance instead of 70 percent, and increased National Guard funds by $1,700,000.

It praised Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson's elimination of 163,000 civil workers, but said there was still room for further cuts. There is now one civilian to two uniformed men in the military forces compared to a ratio of about 1 to 4 prior to the war, the committee said.

State Dept. Plans to Improve Observation Posts Near China

The State Department intends to strengthen its observation posts around the edge of China with the help of funds voted by the House Appropriations Committee yesterday.

Officials formerly stationed in Communist China will be reassigned to other posts near China in southeast Asia, India and Pakistan. Thirteen new consulates will be opened in the Far East and one in the Middle East, in places where the United States has not had diplomatic representation before.

The location of these new posts is being kept secret for the time being, although the committee was told in confidence where they would be.

Presumably some will be near the Chinese border of Indo-China and Burma and, possibly, in the Himalayn regions of Nepal and Kashmir. The State Department just isn't telling.

"Obviously we cannot forget China with its 450 or 500 million people," said Livingston Merchant, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs, in testimony made public by the committee yesterday.

"The problem of obtaining reliable information upon which to base our estimates and our policies will be multiplied many times by the fact that we no longer have our consular establishments within the country.

"What will be required is a strengthening, a very substantial strengthening, if we are to be effective, of all the posts in the countries bordering on China, the whole periphery running down through southeast Asia into the Near East and Africa.

"We feel it essential that we should have trained men there at each post a trained China-language officer with required supporting staff to obtain information, to analyze it and transmit it back to Washington."

The reference to "the Near East and Africa" was an obvious reference to the State Department area, under Assistant Secretary George C. McGhee, that embraces Burma, India, Pakistan and Afghanistan as well as the Arab and African countries far from China.

The State Department told the committee that 77 Americans and 382 aliens were being withdrawn from diplomatic and consular posts in China. Sixteen Americans and 27 aliens will be placed in the new diplomatic posts in Asia; 38 more will be used to strengthen existing posts, and 17 will be used to train foreign service officers for Asiatic duties.

The committee approved a total of $217,651,297 for the State Department, which is $12,426,100 less than requested. Compared with this year, it is a decrease of $82,754,099, but the actual slash is far smaller, for the 1949-50 appropriations included nonrecurring expenses such as 45 million for the International Refugee Organization.

The international information and educational programs, including the Voice of America broadcasts, got a total of 34 million, representing a cut of $2,645,000 below the budget estimates. The subcommittee under Chairman John J. Rooney (D., N. Y.) ordered that none of this cut come from the Voice of America broadcasting.

One segment of the department that took a beating from the committee was the section that prepares the documentary volumes on "Foreign Relations of the United States." These books, long a standby of students and historians, have been published since 1861; they are now running 17 years behind because of the vast increase in diplomatic business in recent years.

The latest volumes cover the year 1933, and the time lag is expected to get worse as the volumes come closer to the busy prewar and wartime years.

Accordingly, the department asked for 23 additional employes and an additional $287,000 to speed up the compiling, editing and printing of the books so that they would, in a few years, be 10 years rather than 17 years out of date. But the committee ruled that this was an unnecessary expense, and said the work would have to plod along with the 20 employes now assigned to it.

The committee also refused to increase the total for entertainment allowances of employes abroad by more than $25,000, although the department had asked for an increase of $329,000.

In its report, the subcommittee again stressed its "concern" over the large number of international organizations to which the United States has to contribute, and over the "unusually high percentage" of the American contributions.

Congressmen To Get Lamps, Not New Door

Will Trade: One revolving door for 1000 desk lamps!

This was one of the decisions made by the House Appropriations Committee yesterday in forwarding the omnibus Federal appropriation bill to the House.

The committee report said a proposal had been made to spend $16,000 for replacing two revolving doors in the old House Office Building.

"The committee approves of the replacement of one of these two doors," the report said, "and desires that the architect (Capitol Architect David Lynn) utilize the other $8000 for replacement of obsolete desk lamps for offices and committees. It is understood that as many as 1000 can be replaced with this small allotment."

The committee, for the second year in a row, took a firm stand against allowing the Library of Congress to spend money for piping in music programs for card catalogue employes.

A 6-million-dollar cut was made in the 10 million dollars proposed for spending next year on the long-range program for modernizing the Capitol's heating, lighting, and air-conditioning system. The committee said four million was all that could be used in the next year, indicating the additional funds would be granted later.

WHAT MAKES A GOOD EGG?

GIANT feels that most important points about an egg are its freshness and quality. That's why GIANT handles only eggs from nearby farms, thus making it possible for us to bring you eggs of "top" quality in their freshest condition.

Its quality is related to breeding, care, and proper scientific feeding of the chickens. That's why GIANT gets its eggs from farmers who are exclusively egg producers and whose sole attention and scientific knowledge is devoted to outstanding egg production. There's a great difference between eggs produced by chickens which roam the farm picking up "scratch" here and there—and eggs produced by chickens fed with scientific mash (grain, bran) and other fattening foods including a daily ration of buttermilk and even cod liver oil. It's eggs of this latter kind of chickens which GIANT features in every one of its 20 stores.

Police Jurisdiction Decision Demanded

Interior Department and District Government officials were told yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee to untangle some jurisdictional questions about who's to police the parks and who the streets of Washington.

Representative Michael J. Kirwan (D., Ohio) said the solution is to have the United States Park Police watch the parks and the Metropolitan Police watch the streets. As it is, he said, there is considerable duplication.

Park and Metropolitan police officials already have discussed a move to let the Metropolitan police take jurisdiction over the minor circles, triangles and squares here. They are part of the Federal park system, but are entirely surrounded by streets.

Plan Discussed

The proposed move was disclosed in recent hearings before the House District crime investigating subcommittee. Officials of the National Capital Parks Office, under which the Park Police operate, reported they discussed the plan with Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of Metropolitan Police. They said he indicated he is favorably inclined to it. Parks officials said they have gone no further with the idea, but plan to seek a conference with Barrett soon to complete arrangements.

The Appropriations Committee wrote into its report on the Federal omnibus appropriation bill this recommendation drafted by the subcommittee of which Kirwan is chairman:

"The committee's attention has been called to the difficult situation which exists owing to the intermingling of properties under the jurisdiction of the National Capital Parks with areas under the jurisdiction of the District.

Legislation, if Necessary

"The committee urges that the Secretary (of Interior) discuss these matters at once with the appropriate officials of the District and endeavor as soon as possible to propose remedies for this administrative problem. If necessary legislation should be submitted . . ."

Kirwan said the report has no bearing on the question of segregation in District areas. This question, too, has raised a jurisdictional issue between Interior and District officials.

While ordering the District-Interior conference on policing, the House committee refused funds for 41 more Park Police. It said 40 more for this year had been granted, and the further increase for next year is "not justified at this time."

Funds Recommended

The committee did, however, recommend funds for assigning more assistant U. S. attorneys and deputy U. S. marshals to Washington. It did not specify how many of each; Justice Department officials had said five more attorneys and six more deputy marshals would be assigned here if its $1,298,500 budget increase for hiring such personnel were approved; the committee granted all but $197,000 of the requested increase.

The committee emphasized that the District is not to be slighted in parceling out the additional assistant U. S. Attorneys and deputy marshals. Its report on the money bill said the committee had heard of the "serious" situation in the District, where there are only 27 assistant U. S. attorney to service courts with 41 judges, and that the extra funds will help alleviate this problem.

The committee refused funds to assign a fourth Metropolitan Police officer to duty at the Capitol. It approved $418,000 for the White House Police.

$152,700 Fund Approved For National Arboretum

A $152,700 fund for running the National Arboretum in Northeast Washington for the year starting next July 1 was approved yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee. The fund is the amount asked in the President's budget, and it was made part of the general Federal appropriation bill.

Soldiers' Home Given $2,395,000 Appropriation

A $2,395,000 fund for running Soldiers Home here for the year starting next July 1 was approved yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee. It was the full amount recommended in the President's budget. It is included in the omnibus appropriation bill.

Marshall Hgts. Improvement Freeze Ordered Terminated

minority group without the necessity of or firmer action by the committee."

Bitter behind-the-scenes tug-of-war over the construction "freeze" has raged ever since it was invoked.

Marshall Heights residents, opposed to the whole idea of slum clearance in their own neighborhood, have been urging the order lifted and prompt installation of sewer and water facilities and some street grading by the District highway department.

Their chief Hill spokesman is Representative John Philips (R., Calif.), a member of the House Appropriations Committee.

On the other side are:

1. NCPPC which has spent three years drafting a detailed redevelopment plan for Marshall Heights, approved by the Commissioners after lengthy public hearings. NCPPC believes the sparsely settled area on the city's outskirts is an ideal place to launch the first slum clearance project.

2. The District Commissioners who feel particularly strongly that it would be more practical and less expensive from the homeowners' viewpoint to make public improvements in hilly Marshall Heights through a complete redevelopment plan with an extensive rerouting of the street layout, and

3. Members of the Senate Banking Subcommittee on Housing, notably Senators Sparkman (D., Ala.) and Flanders (R., Vt.), who think congressional appropriations committees never have allowed themselves a thorough briefing on the NCPPC-approved Marshall Heights blueprint. They also feel that lifting the "freeze" order eliminates the "urgency" factor of the drive for slum clearance funds.

Three years running, the House Appropriations Committee has denied money to start local slum clearance work.

Sparkman and Flanders last fall asked NCPPC to delay lifting the "freeze" until Congress could study and possibly reconsider its past objections to the project.

Yesterday Sparkman said he had not given up all hope" on Marshall Heights, but conceded the "freeze" should be lifted "if this Congress doesn't take favorable action."

NCPPC devoted a day last week to the question of rescinding the controversial order and deferred action until its April meeting.

The Coordinating Committee on Housing and Redevelopment, it was learned yesterday, has undertaken a study of other blighted areas that fit into the NCPPC comprehensive plan for Washington and that could be financed under provisions of the Housing Act of last year.

The committee allowed NCPPC $724,500 for land acquisition in the Washington metropolitan area—$29,500 less than was requested. Of the approved amount, $480,500 is earmarked for purchase of land in nearby Maryland. The committee noted that these funds are "urgently required" because much of the acreage needed for park purposes is "subject to current subdivision and redevelopment."

National Capital Housing Authority's maintenance and operations budget was trimmed from an asked-for $39,600 to $35,000. The allowed amount represents a $100 increase over the current year's appropriation.

Sentences Reduced for 2 Policemen

District Commissioners yesterday reduced sentences recommended by a police trial board for two policemen found guilty of drinking on duty January 31.

The trial board has recommended dismissal for Pvts. Raymond R. Camden and Walter G. Kelly, Thirteenth Precinct patrolmen, who were found guilty of drinking at a reportedly illegal bar in a district they had been assigned to watch.

Specific charges against them were failing constantly to patrol their beats, drinking on duty, neglect of duty and conduct prejudicial to the reputation and good order of the police force.

On the recommendation of Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, the Commissioners reduced the sentences to the extent of allowing Camden to resign and fining Kelly $200.

Barrett said Camden had asked permission to resign, and said he felt the best interests of the department would be served by allowing him to do so. In recommending a lesser penalty for Kelly, Barrett said he felt Kelly had been influenced in his actions by Camden.

Kelly has served on the force for a year; Camden, for nearly three.

Freedmen's Budget Under Fire

share of the rehabilitation program was held at $25,000 a year for several years, while the Federal share mounted to the point where Federal Security officials were proposing $230,000 for it next year. By the shuffle, the District share would go up to $85,000, the Federal share down to $170,000.

That $60,000 in Federal funds, plus another $100,000, is to go for meeting normal salary increases of State employes whose pay comes from the Federal grants for rehabilitation of handicapped civilians, the committee said.

In its slap at Freedmen's Hospital officials, the committee said the hospital's budget breakdown was "totally unrealistic" in terms of the actual spending plan the officials had in mind. The committee said the officials asked $84,000 for "urgently needed" equipment, when they actually plan to spend $65,000 of that amount for materials and supplies.

"Grossly Unfair" Juggling

Such "budgetary juggling," the committee said, was grossly unfair." The report told the Federal Security Administrator to see that it does not happen again. Freedmen's Hospital comes under FSA.

Despite the scolding, the committee granted Freedmen's all but $31,000 of the requested $2,631,000 budget.

For St. Elizabeths Hospital, the committee approved a new $5,588,000 treatment building, containing separate facilities for male and female patients, to replace the old Oaks and Toner buildings. Of this, $1,500,000 would be appropriated for next year and the rest covered by later appropriations.

For the St. Elizabeths operating budget, the committee approved $1,948,000, a cut of $75,000 below what was asked. The report pointed out that the Federal appropriation makes up about 19 percent of the hospital's working budget, the rest being paid back by other agencies, mainly the District. The committee suggested that the $75,000 cut in the Federal part of the hospital's budget would produce a corresponding reduction in the District share. The separate District budget is set up to make an $8,105,000 payment to St. Elizabeths for the support of indigent District patients there.

Cafeteria Plan Delayed

Other St. Elizabeths building and repair funds, totaling $506,000, were approved, but the committee postponed granting $40,000 for preparing plans for a cafeteria annex to two of the hospital buildings.

For Howard University the committee approved $2,500,000 for operating expenses, $100,000 for planning a preclinical medical building, and $1,662,000 in additional for the university's construction program. The committee turned thumbs down on a proposal to grant a $910,000 increase in the limits of cost fixed earlier for the dental school and auditorium buildings. It also held up a $332,000 fund to complete the engineering building because it won't be needed until fiscal year-after-next.

The bill also carries $75,000 for the Army engineers to improve the north side of the Washington channel.

Included in the bill was $368,200 for the Columbia Institution for the Deaf, the amount asked in the President's budget.

The Gallup Poll

U. S. Voters See USSR Winning 'Cold War'

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 21.—Secretary of State Dean Acheson's plea for "total diplomacy" in the "life and death struggle with a powerful foe"—Russia—raises the question whether the United States is winning or losing the cold war.

Among American voters who understand the meaning of the term "cold war" there is a feeling at present that the United States is not doing too well in the struggle.

More of them think Moscow has the upper hand than think Washington has. This feeling has grown during the past two years, for voters take a less favorable view of the situation today than they did in 1948.

With the cold war now in its fourth year, the American Institute of Public Opinion questioned a cross-section of the Nation's voters to determine, first, how many people know what is meant by the term, and second, how much progress these voters think the United States has made in the cold war.

The first question was:

"Will you tell me what the term 'cold war' means?"

A total of 58 percent gave a generally correct definition, calling it a "war of nerves," "war without shooting," "situation between Russia and United States" or some similar name.

The other 42 percent either did not know (36 percent) or gave a vague or incorrect answer (6 percent).

Those who indicated a correct knowledge of the term were asked:

"Do you think the United States is winning or losing the cold war with Russia?"

United States winning	16%
Russia winning	23
Neither	5
Don't know	14
	58%

When this same question was put to a vote in an institute survey in December, 1948, the results were:

DECEMBER, 1948
United States winning	17%
Russia winning	15
Neither	16
Don't know	6
	54%

The remaining 46 percent in the 1948 survey revealed that they did not know the meaning of the term "cold war."

Portrait of a Portraitist . . .

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post
Washington portrait painter Sam C. Gholson in his studio

It was a Washington portrait painter, Sam C. Gholson, who introduced Maj. Racey Jordan to Gen. Leslie Groves.

Jordan was the former Army officer who made charges about atomic secrets being disclosed to Russia. Groves was the Army executive who headed the atomic energy project in its military days.

But it was Gholson, a slim, 30-year-old Mississippian, who painted both men—on both sides of the question of security.

That would seem to be the life of a portrait painter in Washington. Gholson in four years here has done a number of portraits of newsworthy Washingtonians.

In the atomic energy sphere, he's painted David E. Lilienthal, retired chairman of the AEC, and Col. John Lansdale, who was chief security officer of the Manhattan District.

Militarily speaking, he's painted Gens. Carl Spaatz, Lavern Saunders and two Andersons—Samuel and Frederick — both Air Force generals.

There's an admiral on his list—Rear Adm. Ellis M. Zacharias (ret.), wartime deputy chief of the Office of Naval Intelligence — together with Sir John Boyd Orr, former director general of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization.

There have been also a goodly number of Washington debutantes and matrons.

Gholson, who lives at 2039 New Hampshire ave. nw., was born in Holly Springs, Miss.; attended Washington and Lee University, and graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, and the Pensylvania Academy of Fine Arts in 1944. His studio is at 1351 Wallach pl. nw.

He has one hobby.

In his spare time, he says, he also likes to paint.

Court Librarian Has Answers For D. C.'s Perplexed Lawyers

When a lawyer is perplexed by a legal problem, he is apt to go to Elphonzo W. "Alphonso" Freeman, who never studied law.

When a judge wants to know what is going on around District Court, he may seek out the same man, for Freeman has been employed in the court probably longer than anyone.

Freeman, 66-year-old Negro, will complete his fiftieth year in the court's law library June 1—and he has no plans for retiring.

On Washington's Birthday

Born here in 1884 on Washington's birthday, Freeman in 1899 completed a two-year business course at the old Douglas School, 1st and Pierce sts. nw.

He already had helped his father, Charles D. Freeman, a court file-clerk, salvage books and records of the Supreme Court, following the Capitol fire of 1888.

He wanted to be a pharmacist, but his father wanted him to be a lawyer. He became neither.

In 1900, he was employed as a messenger at the court library for $35 a month.

Today, as chief librarian he makes $300 a month and is responsible for 30,000 books worth more than $100,000.

He knows everybody at court and everybody knows "Alphonso."

In law schools, students are told that if they "don't know the law, look it up, and if it can't be found ask Alphonso." Many noted lawyers and judges have heeded this advice.

His "Greatest" Jurist

Freeman remembers as perhaps his "greatest" jurist, Judge Ashley M. Gould. When Judge Gould died in 1921, the prisoners he had sent to jail collected money to send the judge a spray of flowers, he recalled.

As to the greatest lawyer, Alphonso declined to say. "There are too many of them."

Freeman lives with his wife at 1106 Lamont st. nw. He is an official of the Third Baptist Church, 5th and Q sts. nw., where he is superintendent of the Sunday School, chairman of the board of trustees, and director of music.

Britain Eases Rationing

London, March 21 (U.P.).—Philip Noel Baker, Minister of Fuel and Power, anounced in Commons that the gasoline ration will be doubled during June, July and August. It will allow the average motorist enough fuel to drive 180 miles during each of the three months.

Warrantless Search Allowed As Israel Fights Black Market

Jerusalem, March 21 (AP).—Israeli food control agents are searching private homes for black market food without a warrant.

The Knesset (parliament) has upheld searches by food control department officers and other designated officials despite charges of a "police state."

Parliament's action, however, was construed as making it clear that the searchers always must have the specific authority of a senior official of the Ministry of Supply and Rationing and then only when there were adequate grounds for suspecting hoarding food for black market sales.

Meat especially is hard to get in Israel, and during the three days a week it is allowed to be sold it is so strictly rationed that the average person may only get around one pound for the whole period—if he's lucky.

Tourists in Israel are entitled to a total of 10 meat meals per week. That doesn't mean they always can find it in hotels, cafes or restaurants fo ra break in the monotonous daily diet of tasteless frozen fish.

When they do, rarely is it beefsteak. Their portion of meat may be a fine slivers from a scrawny chicken or a "piece of veal."

Republican Chiefs Open Fight To Force Acheson Resignation

Acheson is the man charged by our Government with direction of the cold war fight against the world-wide spread of Communism."

Wherry, Republican leader of the Senate, referred to Hiss as Secretary Acheson's "pal".

The two Republican orators spoke at the Nebraska Republican Founders' Day banquet in the Cornhusker Hotel in Lincoln.

Wherry said Acheson "is the most powerful man in the Government today. The voice is the voice of President Truman, but the hand is the hand of Dean Acheson. Apparently, he has become so powerful, as the idol of the left wing appease-Russia agitators, that President Truman is fearful, should he fire Mr. Acheson, he will lose the support of this radical, socialistic, pressure group in the coming elections, and in 1952.

"In the most vital fields of governmental activity, is the hand of Secretary Acheson and the Hisses. Dean Acheson and the Alger Hiss clique have been close collaborators in the State Department for many years. They have been joint architects of many schemes that have run our foreign relations into the ditch . . .

"Who sat at the side of our ailing late President, and prompted him with the answers at Yalta, when China was betrayed to Russia along with Poland, Czechoslovakia, and all those other countries of eastern Europe?

"Why, of course, Mr. Acheson's pal, Hiss. When China pleaded for aid to resist the Red armies, who turned the cold shoulder on our faithful war ally and friend through the years? You know it was Mr. Acheson.

"While he and the Hiss crowd have been calling the signals in the State Department, 14 men in the Moscow Politboro have captured control of one-fifth of the globe's land surface, 13 million square miles, and one third of all mankind, 800 million human beings. . . ."

Chairman Gabrielson took a crack at Americans for Democratic Action, describing it as a "hybrid, nefarious political organization."

"Its top membership," he said, "includes New Dealers, Fair Dealers, radicals, Socialists, and just plain ex-bureaucrats who would like to get back on the payroll . . .

"We have the right to demand of President Truman, and will demand it repeatedly, that he either accept the label of socialism in his Administration or else reject those who believe in socialism. And that would mean rejecting the support of his off-color political party, the Amreicans for Democratic Action."

House Unit Votes Leave Curb, Big Job 'Ax' to Commerce Chief

to lay off about 200 workers, and minor reductions would have to be made by Maritime, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, Federal Communications, Civil Service Commission, Civil Aeronautics Board, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, and the Reconstruction Finance Corp., among other agencies.

These reductions, however, would be offset in part for a few agency increased voted by the committee. The Federal Bureau of Investigation, for example, would have 700 more jobs, about half of them here. It was the only agency whose big increase as proposed by the President was approved without change by the committee.

The Internal Revenue Bureau would get 1000 new jobs. The President asked for 3000 more. Labor's wage and hour division was given a cut of $1,180,600 by the committee, but it would have $4,005,300 more than it has for this year. The cut would knock out about 300 proposed new jobs.

The Census Bureau would get most of the money it requested to hire clerks here and in Philadelphia to tabulate census results. The Public Health Service also would be able to expand its staff here and in the field.

A rider to the omnibus appropriation bill would require all Federal workers to take annual leave this year as they earned it or else they would lose it at the end of this calender year.

The rider is subject to a point of order when the bill is debated on the House floor next week as it is legislation on an appropriation bill. Employe union leaders will try to get a member to raise the point of order against it.

As revealed here exclusively yesterday, the rider was indorsed in principle by Budget Director Pace, who speaks for the White House on such matters. Pace, however, suggested to the committee that the leave problem be handled by administrative orders from agency heads instead of by law.

In its report, the committee called on the Postoffice and Civil Service Committee to "review the entire leave situation with a view to establishing a sound and equitable policy which will prevent the abuses possible under current legislation."

It also recommended the restriction on further accumulation of annual leave be reenacted in succeeding years.

The leave rider would not force any Federal worker to lose an hour of annual leave, provided he takes leave as he earns it this year. If he had 50 days as of January 1, for example, he could carry over that amount at the end of this year. He will earn 26 days this year and he would lose any part of it he failed to take. The rider wouldn't permit him to carry over more than 50 days.

The committee rejected a proposal by Representative Albert Thomas (D., Tex.) to require the 300,000 employes in the two-score independent agencies to take all of their accumulated annual leave by July 1. It also turned down another Thomas suggestion to force the independent agencies to absorb the cost of last year's pay raise acts out of available funds.

Another rider would give the Commerce Secretary "absolute discretion" to fire any officer or employe under him "whenever he shall deem such termination necessary or advisable in the interests of the United States."

That is sweeping authority rarely given to any Federal official. Under it the appeals rights of career employes and veterans would be thrown into the ashcan. The Secretary would have the power to fire any Commerce employe on the spot and the employe would have no comeback whatever.

As reported here Monday, Representative John Rooney (D., N. Y.) proposed such a rider when he expressed dissatisfaction over the handling of the Commerce Department employe loyalty program.

Truman Maps Stump Tour

Key West, Fla., March 21 (AP).—President Truman mapped strategy today for stumping tours this spring and next fall matching the intensity of his 31,500-mile "give 'em hell" campaign of 1948.

He will hit the road in early May for a rear-platform speaking swing that will carry him into Washington State about May 11 for the dedication of Grand Coulee Dam. It will wind up with a fighting political talk in Chicago Stadium the night of May 15 at a giant Democratic rally.

The trip will include "off-the-cuff" talks to crowds at the railroad tracks, to and from the West Coast, and plugs for Democratic candidates as well as Fair Deal measures. Other projects besides Grand Coulee may be visited on the Western swing.

An even longer, more intensive campaign is being planned for the fall, when the President will go into a score or more States to slug it out for Democratic congressional candidates.

The "Winter White House" disclosed that President Truman had a second telephone conference yesterday with Secretary of State Acheson.

Acheson called, Charles G. Ross, presidential secretary, said, after Mr. Truman blasted reports he might be replaced and declared he thought Acheson was running the department "admirably."

Pitching Horseshoes
By BILLY ROSE
STARTING tonight, no French champagne will be sold at my night club in New York, and patrons who request same will have to settle for domestic fizz-water—which is at lot easier on the pocketbook.
What gives?
The French Communists and Coca-Cola—that's what gives.
As you probably know, the French National Assembly recently passed a bill which, without naming the product, would prohibit the bottling and sale of Coca-Cola in France and its colonies.
Two pressure groups were responsible for this measure—the wine interests which feared that the soft drink might cut into their profits, and the Communists who, though they have no love for the vintners, saw an opportunity to take a rabbit punch at the United States.
SUITING invective to word, the Commie paper, L'Humanite, unleashed a campaign against the "coca-colonization" of the country, loud-mouthing that the basic syrup is highly toxic and would turn La Belle France into a nation of "cocaholics."
At the same time, the right-wing press, fronting for the fizz merchants, began to blab along the same lines, and even the usually sensible Le Monde warned that "the moral landscape of France is at stake."
Before I go any further, let me get it into the record that I'm not a big Coke drinker and never owned a share of stock in the company.
As far as I'm concerned, the beverage is just another American product like Orange Crush, 7-Up or Dr. Brown's Celery Tonic. Furthermore, under ordinary circumstances I wouldn't even be mad at the French wine lobby for only doing to Coca-Cola what our butter producers are doing for yellow oleomargarine.
ments, one medical, the economic. Let's consider them in that order.
The medical argument boils down to the contention that the syrup used in the manufacture of Coca-Cola is made from bug juice and ground razor blades, and is guaranteed to cause a variety of ailments ranging from pink-eye to mortis.
WELL, the best answer to that jabberwocky statement was made by Jim Farley, roving ambassador for the soft drink company.
"Coca-Cola was a friend to the health of the American soldiers who liberated France from the Nazis so that Communist deputies could speak in session today."
As for the argument that the distribution of Coca-Cola will create unemployment by cutting into profits—that, too, is silly.
The set-up of the Coca-Cola Export Corp. is such that the entire manufacturing process would be carried on by French personnel, on French soil and under French control and ownership.
Or to put it another way, it would be the equivalent of a new French industry potentially a pretty big thing from the standpoint of more than 100,000 jobs, part or all of which would come from the payrolls of its subsidiaries.
FROM the bottling of French champagne to the choicest cognac, one of the oldest and most honorable industries in France is the production of wine. Its annual output is valued at more than $1,000,000,000, and it employs directly and indirectly more than 5,000,000 persons. Its products are known and appreciated throughout the world. Its importance to the economy of France is obvious.

First In Assaults

By any standard Washington's 1949 crime record, as disclosed in the FBI's Uniform Crime Reports, is unenviable. Again the Capital has the dubious distinction of leading the Nation in aggravated assaults (although New York City figures are incomplete, there is no reason to believe that Washington's lead of last year will be diminished). The clear implication is that the citizen on the street is more in danger of molestation in Washington than in any other major city. The 4314 aggravated assaults recorded here last year average nearly 12 a day and show an increase of 6½ percent over 1948.

Altogether, the District ranks higher than its population class warrants in six major categories of crimes. To be sure, the 1949 report shows a decrease in some of the classifications. For example, there were 33 percent fewer robberies here than in 1948; there also were declines in larcenies, burglaries and auto thefts. The robbery figures are not strictly accurate, because the District does not use the FBI classification and some crimes such as pursesnatching, listed elsewhere as robberies, are classed as lesser crimes here. Nonetheless, there has been a decrease both in robberies and in larcenies.

It is interesting to note that in defending the record Police Superintendent Barrett takes pride in the department's complete reporting system—a system installed only after numerous complaints of "pocketed" crime reports. Major Barrett explains the District's poor showing by the city's transient character, the fact that it is the heart of a large metropolitan area, and the fact that every crime is recorded even though it may turn out later to be insignificant. He also cites the large amount of Negro crime; taking his figures, for example, Negroes accounted for 61 percent of the assaults. It is no secret, of course, that the Negro crime rate here is appalling. What is important is to get at the causes.

It is true that the figures furnished the FBI by other cities are in some instances unreliable, and comparisons are inaccurate. Some Southern cities are lax in the reporting of Negro crimes. Nonetheless, the fact that by its own records Washington has shown an increase in aggravated assaults shows pretty conclusively where the emphasis ought to be. As for the fact that reports from other cities are inadequate, this is an argument for stricter adherence to national standards rather than for underplaying or doctoring the District figures.

Taft's History

Senator Taft's efforts to reconstruct history in the light of the Lodge-Gossett resolution for reform of our electoral system seems to us about as fruitful as any other speculation under the heading, "It might have been." The Senator's prize exhibit seems to be a table showing that if the Lodge-Gossett system of counting electoral votes had been in effect in 1896 Bryan would have been elected over McKinley. McKinley got 7,035,638 popular votes to Bryan's 6,467,946, which gave him, under the bloc system of counting, 60.6 percent of the electoral vote to Bryan's 39.37 percent. Under the Lodge-Gossett resolution, says Senator Taft, Bryan would have won with 49.51 percent of the electoral vote to McKinley's 48.17 percent. This is intended to show that the proposed constitutional change would put the Republican Party under a severe handicap.

The trouble with the argument is that it proves the opposite from what Senator Taft intends. It shows that in 1896, as in subsequent years, the presidential contest was for the most part confined to the big pivotal States. Bryan got the large block of Southern electoral votes with relatively few people in the South going to the polls. They didn't go to the polls because it was obvious that Bryan would get the electoral votes of the South anyway. It is precisely this deadening sort of bloc voting that the Lodge-Gossett resolution is designed to correct.

The most obvious fact is that if electoral votes had been distributed in the same proportion as popular votes cast back in 1896, we should have had a different kind of campaign and a different turnout of voters. Heavier votes on the part of both Democrats and Republicans in the South would have been certain. Consequently, the distribution of votes, both popular and electoral, would have been different. What the result would have been no one can say. The assumption that Bryan would have been elected is as treacherous as an effort to determine what would have happened if the Confederacy had won at Gettysburg or what would have been the outcome of a football game 20 years ago if the rules had been different.

We hope that no member of the House will be misled by this sort of meaningless speculation. The country needs the Lodge-Gossett resolution because it would give us a national presidential contest that would be fair to both parties and to all sections of the country. It is understandable that Senator Taft, representing one of the big pivotal States, would prefer to retain a system that virtually forces both parties to go to one of those pivotal States for their candidates. But the great majority in both parties have good reason to break away from the present obsolete system which concentrates presidential contests and candidacies in a few big States. We cannot help thinking that if the House gives them a chance they will vote their approval of this reform.

For Want Of A Code

Much of the hullabaloo that Senator McCarthy has aroused with his trumped-up charges might have been avoided by a code of fair procedure for congressional investigations. Acting without any such code, the Tydings subcommittee made a sincere effort to restrict Mr. McCarthy to presentation of facts and to give equal prominence to the denials of persons recklessly accused of Communist sympathies. But its efforts have not prevented the broadcasting of irresponsible charges from the committee room. Nor have they prevented the spread of confusion and loose suspicions relating to our foreign policy. The primary responsibility falls, of course, on Senator McCarthy, but his tirades could and would have been shortcircuited by proper investigative procedure.

The best investigators of our time have worked quietly until they assembled substantial facts to go on. This means careful staff work before open hearings are held. It is the business of the staff to separate flimsy and groundless charges from charges that have some evidence behind them. Then when the open hearing goes forward, a consistent and well-rounded picture can be presented, without releasing any trial balloons filled with hot air or poison gas. Experience has shown that when individual reputations are at stake such preliminary investigative work and screening is imperative if the rudiments of fairness are to be observed.

At the beginning of the present inquiry Senator Tydings made extraordinary efforts to be fair. He insisted on bringing immediately into the record relevant facts about each case—facts that Senator McCarthy had ignored. In this way he exposed the hollowness of the McCarthy accusations. But the result was to fill the air with a bedlam of charges and countercharges highly damaging to our national unity and to the conduct of our foreign policy. As a practical matter, we doubt that any committee can be prepared to give immediate refutation to wild charges, and, if it could, a great deal of harm would nevertheless be done by officially airing mere rumor and disconnected bits of information that add up to nothing.

What has been lacking here is careful staff work. Only on Monday did the subcommittee get from Senator McCarthy in confidence a list of 81 cases of alleged Communist infiltration in the State Department. Obviously the subcommittee should have had this list and should have done extensive checking as to the facts before any hearings were held. Then it could have given the public facts instead of Mr. McCarthy's inflamed imaginings. With members of both parties and a competent staff on hand to see that the facts were properly sifted, there would have been no danger of a whitewashing. And the Senate could have saved itself from an orgy of mudthrowing.

Apparently the committee now intends to sift the evidence carefully and check it against State Department records before any further hearings are held. That is all to the good. But the fact remains that, in the hearings to date, Senator McCarthy has succeeded in taking the ball and running wild with it. This seems to us greatly to strengthen the case for adoption of a code of fair procedure for all congressional investigations. Two years ago we printed a series of editorials pointing to the need for such a code, and outlining what it should contain. The pertinence of the rules we suggested, and perhaps additional ones, looms even larger today. For Congress is falling in the esteem of the people, and that decline is likely to continue until it curbs the misuse of its vast investigative power to serve petty, mean and partisan ends.

Casualness At Yalta

The memoirists who participated in the determination of war policy ought to get together on what happened when decisions were taken. Every participant in the Yalta Conference, for instance, seems to have a different version of the circumstances. For example, Admiral Leahy, whose book, I Was There, is just out, said last week:

> The President said to me that the Russians wanted only to get back what the Japanese had taken from them. He said, "That looks pretty reasonable to me," and I said it looked reasonable to me, too . . . We never pressed them to get into the war against Japan. We gained nothing by having them in the war, although the Army always wanted it. We had Japan practically defeated anyway.

This is a new explanation of why the Manchurian concessions were handed to Russia. Before that Mr. Stettinius had said the President and the War Department swapped them for badly-needed help against Japan. Neither the Navy, which knew the effect of its blockade on Japan, nor the Air Force, which likewise knew the effect of its bombing on Japan, shared their pessimism. And Admiral Leahy says in effect that aid against Japan wasn't a consideration at all. "We had Japan practically defeated anyway," he says, and he is referring to the time of Yalta, or February, 1945, two months before the Germans surrendered. The reason for the cessions at Yalta was that they were "reasonable." Reasonable! To give back to a neutral Russia as a free gift concessions which she herself had extorted from belligerent China! It looks as if there was only the sketchiest knowledge of Manchuria at Yalta.

ECA Votes

It seemed possible that the House Foreign Affairs Committee would reverse its vote on Monday on the new ECA appropriation rather than allow it to stand. But the vote is still on the record, though the Senate committee yesterday furnished a contrast. What the House committee has done is to subvert the original purposes of the Marshall initiative. These were, first, to promote production, secondly, to further fiscal and monetary stability and, thirdly, to facilitate world trade. Production has been restored, but the policy still lags in respect of the other two purposes. It should be the aim of Congress so to handle the new appropriation as to help in the attainment of its own objectives, and this is the Senate committee's approach.

The Senate committee has agreed to Mr. Hoffman's request for $2950 millions, but the House committee reduced it to $1950 millions, and would meet the billion-dollar deficit by authorizing CCC to supply an equivalent amount of farm commodities. This would not be a dumping operation, for the sum to be set aside in the third Marshall year includes $1.6 billion for farm products. However, it would put upon the ECA the obligation to rely upon Government instead of private procurement. To this extent the purchases, being made at price support levels, would be an extra drain on ECA funds. The senatorial vote goes even further than Mr. Hoffman would in the promotion of "integration." Mr. Hoffman proposes to divert a sizable lump of the funds to the proposed payments union so as to meet the second and third objectives of Congress. The Senators, on Mr. Fulbright's motion, would add to the fund 50 percent of the counterpart money—that is to say, the local currencies paid out in each country in payment for ECA gifts. If this is not made mandatory, it will lend weight to Mr. Hoffman's crusade; otherwise it would add to rigidity in administration which in this case would be intolerable.

Hemisphere Economics

Washington is host during the next 10 days to the first special meeting of the Inter-American Economic and Social Council. The occasion is an auspicious one, and the presence of high cabinet and finance officials from a number of Latin American republics bodes well for the importance attached to the conference of this specialized hemisphere agency. Four main items are on the agenda: the technical assistance program, reservations to the economic pact of Bogota, problems resulting from British currency devaluation and the proposed Buenos Aires economic conference. The first two—technical assistance and the Bogota pact—are likely to be the most important.

A number of national objections arising since the Bogota meeting in 1948 have frustrated ratification of the economic agreement. While it is improbable that all the qualifications will be reconciled here, material progress may be made toward an accord everyone can approve. With respect to technical assistance, the conference is a give-and-take proposition in which there will be a chance to expound the United States' view on self-help and the function of private capital. That at least some conferees are looking at the matter realistically is indicated by the opening speech of the chairman, Senor Julio E. Huertematte of Panama: ". . . It is clear, gentlemen, that private capital will have to play a preponderant part, complementing technical assistance, in bringing about the economic benefits to be obtained . . . through the execution of the proposed program." A not incidental benefit of the presence of Latin American officials here will be the opportunity to advance bilateral commercial treaties covering inducements to private investors. The delegates have both our greeting and our good wishes for a fruitful conference.

Useful Inquiry

Attorney General McGrath is to be congratulated on ordering an investigation by the FBI into reports that John L. Lewis sent "secret signals" to his lieutenants to disregard the recent court order to end the coal strike. Fair-minded men will reserve judgment as to the charges of duplicity leveled against union leaders by an ousted local chieftain. But failure to run down the facts in connection with such an allegation would have encouraged the belief that the Government is willing to be hoodwinked.

Whether or not any secret signals went out from union headquarters, it is obvious that the United Mine Workers took full advantage of the strike supposedly conducted by individual miners acting on their own initiative. It should not be impossible for the FBI to find out why back-to-work movements in response to the court order were squelched and why 370,000 men simultaneously obeyed a single impulse to lawless conduct. To assume, as the union insists, that this action was without common direction is to fly in the face of experience. Orderly labor relations as well as law enforcement demand that the triumph of Mr. Lewis' wishes over his written orders to the local unions be exposed as fully as possible.

"Wolf! Wolf!"

Playing It Safe Trend

By Malvina Lindsay

National Danger

SOME OF MY craftier friends whisper behind their hands that from now on they are going to play it safe. They will belong to nothing, contribute to nothing. They will say nothing, do nothing, even think nothing that might conceivably put them in line of an ideological mud slinger. They will live tight little, rabbity, "me first," un-American lives.

This will mean that many citizenship activities will suffer. And that I believe is just what some of those making reckless charges of communism want. They would like to discourage all "nosey" groups in political disagreement with themselves.

For example, the defaming of Judge Dorothy Kenyon got under way about two years ago in the Middle West when she was used as a straw man for a general attack on the Women's Committee for Lasting Peace in which she was active. This group, devoted to furthering international cooperation, had opposed isolationist candidates at the polls. Such direct action was unheard of from a group of women!

It had also made the mistake of using the bugaboo word "Action in its title. I submit a much smarter title would have been "The Genteel Females' Poetry Circle." But its leaders, many of them women of wealth and standing, were not used to pussyfooting. So Judge Kenyon was singled out for a whispering campaign. Later these same charges were aired by Senator McCarthy—and rebutted by Judge Kenyon—at a congressional hearing.

NOW THEN it also appears it is dangerous to get mixed up in "consumer activities." Senator McCarthy, in charging Dr. Esther Brunauer of the State Department with "Communist front activities," stated that back in the 1930s while she was connected with the American Association of University Women she involved that organization in "consumer activities."

Senator McCarthy supposedly meant consumer activities that from his viewpoint were questionable. Yet there is now a growing tendency to insinuate that any organized consumers are in some way subversive. Yet hasn't the consumer the same right as the National Association of Manufacturers, the American Medical Association and the American Federation of Labor to organize in his own interest?

Now I personally had been thinking of starting a consumers' movement to do something about American technology's sad failure to devise a satisfactory can opener. But maybe I had better play safe. Especially since I have just recalled that fresh out of college on my first newspaper job I joined a group of artistic and literary rebels with the subversive sounding name, "The Wicked Few."

We lasted for only three meetings because of failure to pay the rent for our clubroom over a shoe shining parlor, in which we popped corn over a monkey stove and discussed plans for writing the great American novel. However because of this misadventure. I must now watch my step.

HOWEVER, playing it safe can be a confusing process. Here is Dr. Brunauer, a staid, honorable, basically conservative woman who has distinguished herself in educational fields and also on this country's UNESCO delegation. Yet she has a husband who was born in Hungary! And Hungary is now Communist.

Yet, strange as it may seem to some people, there are former Hungarians who are not Communists! About three years ago when Hungary fell completely into Communist control there was a lot in the papers about the courageous, dramatic step taken by the Hungarian Minister here and his staff. All but the one Communist member of the legation staff resigned, severed ties with their homeland, became exiles, most of them penniless, in this country.

Dr. Brunauer was a friend of the group that took this courageous anti-Communist action. And it was she who encouraged a legation wife to write an account of how the staff members felt in giving up the country they loved for the sake of a principle. That material appeared in my column June 18, 1947, under the title "When Exile Strikes."

Yet the inverted Alice in Wonderland reasoning of those who charge guilt by association could make this incident proof of Dr. Brunauer's Communist affiliations. For was she not a friend of the legation staff that resigned? And had not these staff members been associating with the one Communist member who didn't resign? Hence they had Communist associations. And so had Dr. Brunauer through them! And so had I!

You see, you can't win!

FDR's Health Plan

In his recent article in Collier's Mr. James F. Byrnes attacks "socialized medicine," identifies it with President Truman's proposal for national health insurance, and tries to show that the late President Roosevelt was on his side by printing a quotation from a speech made by FDR in 1940 opposing socialized medicine.

Mr. Byrnes fails to inform us that Mr. Truman opposes it also. In the President's special health message to Congress of November 19, 1945, in which he first put national health insurance and other parts of his broad health program before Congress and the American people, Mr. Truman said:

"What I am recommending is not socialized medicine. Socialized medicine means that all doctors work as employes of Government. The American people want no such system. No such system is here proposed."

Mr. Roosevelt opposed socialized medicine, and before he passed away I know that he favored national health insurance. In December, 1944, I was asked by Mr. Harry Hopkins to confer with him in Washington. Mr. Hopkins and I were friends of long standing, and he had frequently consulted me about his many problems of providing medical care for needy persons during the depression. When I met Mr. Hopkins in his office in the White House, he told me that President Roosevelt was ready to propose a national health program including national health insurance and that a presidential message was to be prepared to this effect. Mr. Hopkins asked my help in preparing this message. I began immediately on the draft, working with another of President Roosevelt's close advisers.

Mr. Roosevelt's untimely death prevented the delivery of his message to Congress, but his position in favor of national health insurance and against socialized medicine was definite.

GM Profits

The sensational profit of General Motors Corp. in 1949 over 1948 was well and truthfully headlined in the March 12 Washington Post: "GM Net in Year Leaps 49 Percent to 656 Million, Sets New Peak."

The point I would comment about was the treatment given the release from GM's publicity department. The information that there was nearly 656 and a half million dollars net profit was set down alongside an "all-time peak" of about one and a half billion dollars gross wages and salaries.

That is, the company announced profits after taxes, but payrolls before taxes. Wouldn't the more honest way be to report them in comparable categories?

The story discloses that taxes paid and accrued by GM was 580 million dollars. Added to the net profit of 656 plus million dollars the gross profit is more than one and one-quarter billion.

This is the figure to compare with the one and one-half billion payroll. But even that needs analysis. The payroll includes the very large executive salaries. When the total of executive salaries is deducted from the whole payroll, the remaining figure is the wages paid to hourly workers.

The CIO automobile workers have shown that the average earning per hour of a GM wage employe is $1.65. The union says that for every $1.65 of gross wages paid to production workers, the corporation made a gross profit of $1.86. Here is the real story in the news release of GM's huge profits.

"Maritime Shuffle"

Your March 16 editorial attacking not only the Maritime Commission—which may have a basis for attack—but also the chairman, was a shockingly unfair piece of business. The chairman, whom you did not name, has always had the reputation of being the best administrator in Washington.

Anybody who knows anything about government would know that since the chairman has been with the commission for only a very short time, he could not possibly be made responsible for errors made by the commission years before he came with it.

I should add here that in no way am I connected with the commission but I have, many years ago worked with an agency of which the present Maritime Commission chairman was head.

Racial Attitudes

The racial question is growing from a stiff breeze to almost hurricane proportions. I write as a confessed Southern man who belongs to the most pro-Negro Protestant denomination in our land, and who himself lived in early childhood in so-called "slavery days," and whose grandparents had so-called slaves, welcomed the abolition of slavery, but they did not relish the spirit with which fanatical men attacked them for having connection with what they did not originate, but would have been glad to see justly but in a cooperative spirit abolished.

It is with this spirit I ask fire-eaters on the racial subject to stop talking of the Southern people like abolitionists did, until they brought on a war which should never have been fought. You who are late arrivals to the United States, or you who by training do not know the spirit of the Southern people in their attitude to the Negro, have the grace and patience to see that reforms such as you are trying to force have never come like a cake can be turned over.

The people of Europe that have lived as different white nations, on each others' borders for centuries, are no closer together in certain particulars than they were ages ago. Different habits, ideals, tastes, but not color, have differentiated them. Each has a mission and so long as they are in spirit not antagonistic, they live apart in their inalienable right to live where they prefer and as they prefer without imposing themselves on others.

Acheson's Negative Policy

Our foreign policy is as out of date as the top of His Majesty's Loyal Opposition's head. Considerable pressure has been brought to bear on Mr. Acheson for a revision of our foreign policy in the light of the unprecedented shift in the last 12 months in the world balance of power. He has finally responded with his Seven-Point Peace Plan—"a major statement of American policy said to have taken three months to draft."

This "major statement," sad to say, is but a translation into sarcasms, insinuations, innuendoes and veiled threats of the Fulton, Mo., speech. This is a statement of attitude—an attitude of petulant truculence—rather than a statement of foreign policy. It asks that both Russia and our "allies" consider us tough just because we have an unpleasant disposition. It does not meet today's requirements.

A speedy revision of our foreign policy is demanded, and in making this revision the Administration must consider one salient fact: there are two world powers today—Russia and the United States—that could individually resist, and successfully, a coordinated attack by the rest of the nations of the world. Russia is bound to know this as well as we do, and it is doubtful that she will allow any degree of unpleasantness on our part to determine her handling of her international relations.

Our two great countries can ill afford the cold war now being waged. They could not survive a death-struggle with each other. They can afford a permanent commission for peace. They can afford a treaty whereby the atom or hydrogen bomb will not be used for at least a week after a formal declaration of war. They might find, after exhausting all other avenues for avoiding the great war, that they can afford to issue joint ultimatums to all the nations of the world that, henceforth, governments of those nations will be selected by ballot rather than bullet. If being sensible means losing face, let's lose face rather than lose our pants.

A. E. BASSETT.
Charlotte, N. C.

From Gautama Buddha, Plato, and Christ through Kant, Jefferson, and Gandhi, political, religious, and philosophic thinkers have been telling us that the good life for state and man is a positive one based on the treatment of ALL men as persons and never as just things. In our treatment and attitude toward the Russians today we are ignoring that advice. Our attitude toward them is negative. The Secretary of State has expressed the attitude of the influential in statements which say as much as, if the Russians want peace, let them come to us. We never think of the Russians as men. They are "Dirty Reds," "Filthy Commies," or just plain "Communists."

Let's not wait for the Russians to adopt our views. Let's be positive. Let's try organize peace conferences and all the other conferences necessary.

It seems to me that our whole approach to communism is wrong. You can't cure communism, any more than typhoid fever, by denouncing it; you have to understand it.

Because man's spiritual demands are not being met is no reason for ignoring them; a sick world needs not less religion but more, and of a higher sort. And there are two sources from which we may perhaps derive it: the infant science of psychiatry, and the ancient lore of the East, as typified for example in the teachings of Buddhism. For the East has always probed much more deeply than the West into man's spiritual nature. And we must remember that neither arms nor food nor money alone will defeat communism; it must be met and conquered where its strength lies, on the spiritual plane.

Greek Election

I want to express my thanks and gratitude for Mr. Marquis Childs' column on "Greek Democracy" of March 18. I read every paragraph carefully and found them amazingly true, except one. That is, American economic and diplomatic representatives in Athens did just the opposite from what Mr. Childs claims. I know that from a very reliable source as I know that the Center parties had agreed before the Greek election to get together after the election. The American officials were fed up with Mr. Tsaldaris' corruption and stupidity and tried their best and in accordance with the wishes of the Greek people to get rid of him.

Johnson's First Year

By Marquis Childs

Economies And Empire Building

IN HIS first year of office Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson has probably made more enemies than any Cabinet officer in modern times. His defenders insist that this was inevitable if he was to do the job of unification and cut through waste and duplication in the military establishment.

Childs

One of his more or less objective critics the other day applied to Johnson that old story about the Southern planter who gives his faithful Negro servant a bottle of dubious whiskey.

Asked his opinion of it a day or two later, the servant answers that it was "just right." Called on to explain, he adds, "If it was any better you wouldn't have given it to me and if it was any worse I couldn't have drunk it."

In the same way if Johnson were any less crude, direct and ruthless, he probably could not have carried through what has been accomplished. If he were any more violent and blustering than he is, he would probably already have been removed from office.

The military men most directly responsible for national security believe that the economies Johnson has effected to date have not harmed the capacity of the three services to defend the country. The belief is that these economies have brought to the service chiefs a greater sense of realism which will in the future insure a better return to the taxpayer on each dollar spent for defense.

At the same time, however, there is a strong realization that the Johnson economies have cut close to the danger line. If Congress now adds its own economies in the defense budget, serious harm may be done.

One of Johnson's troubles at the present moment is that he is a little like a whirling dervish. With his tremendous charge of energy he simply can't stop. He is an empire builder who forever sees bigger and better mountain ranges beyond the horizon.

JOHNSON is just now, for example, conducting an undercover campaign to put a Johnson man in as head of the Central Intelligence Agency. Privately, he is most critical of the CIA, the hush-hush agency intended to coordinate all intelligence reports to the Government.

In part, this reflects the resentment of Army and Navy intelligence at having to work through a new agency. To what degree coordination has been achieved is a question few would be competent to answer since the operations of CIA are so closely screened by secrecy.

Present head of CIA is Rear Admiral R. H. Hillenkoetter. The campaign to replace him has been waged with the usual techniques of internecine warfare in the Government, including the planted report of his imminent resignation. But Hillenkoetter has the active support of President Truman's good friend, Rear Admiral Sidney W. Souers, who cently resigned as executive secretary of the National Security Council. Souers is still, however, a close adviser of the President.

As part of his campaign to win friends and influence people, Johnson invited 1000 spectators to attend the recent Portrex maneuvers, Portrex being the official abbreviation for Puerto Rican Exercise. Included was a plane load of women magazine editors flown down on Johnson's orders.

MILITARY men felt that the presence of such a large gallery greatly lessened the usefulness of Portrex and tended to turn it into a kind of Caribbean show—the speciality of a free cruise into sunny Caribbean waters. Hanson Baldwin, military correspondent of the New York Times, commented on the "lack of realism," giving as one reason for this lack the large number of guests.

Johnson frequently consults with Bernard M. Baruch, who has had so much to do with industrial mobilization in two world wars. After a long conference the other day Baruch flew to New York with Johnson in the famous plane the Dewdrop which was reportedly designed by the Air Force in anticipation of the election of Thomas E. Dewey in the fall of 1948. (The Air Force emphatically denied the plane was intended for Dewey.) Baruch has been advising Johnson on various defense phases.

About Johnson's resignation rumors frequently fly. These can be attributed, in part at least, to his enemies. On one occasion when the Secretary of Defense was under fire, with accompanying reports of his departure, President Truman came to his assistance.

About almost everything he does, including even the economies he has pushed through, there is controversy. But that has been true of Johnson's entire career as he fought his way up the ladder of American Legion politics and then into the national arena. While he has suffered some bad falls in the past, he has shown a remarkable capacity to bounce up again. And at the present moment there is no doubt that he is one of the half-dozen most powerful men in the United States.

The Chaff is naught to the Wheat

Through the awakening light of Christian Science thousands have dropped "the past"—with its anguish or threat of penalty—as a dream from which they are thankfully awakened.

Impartially, to any honest student, the teachings of Christian Science bring relief and release from human woe of every sort, disclosing the deep import of Jeremiah 23:28 "What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord."

They see how this is possible and legitimate as they thoughtfully study its great textbook

SCIENCE and HEALTH—with Key to the Scriptures

They are mercifully led to learn that in all the vastness of infinity there is in divine reality naught but good, for God is infinite good.

The understanding of Christian Science steadily amplifies this spiritual fact of God's infinite and unfailing goodness in the receptive heart. Moreover it translates its meaning into practical human terms of correction and restoration.

McCarthy's Charges

Views Of Readers

ALL WHO respect the principles and traditions upon which our Government is based must feel a sense of outrage at the irresponsible behavior of the Senator from Wisconsin, who is seeking to further his political fortunes and those of his party by assaults upon the reputation of our distinguished Secretary of State and other officials of his department.

But is this behavior outrageous just because distinguished officials happen to be its victims? What about the thousands of less distinguished but equally devoted servants of Government who are called upon, in secret hearings of Loyalty Boards, to defend their reputations and their means of livelihood against the vague charges of secret informants contained in the secret dossiers of the FBI?

What about the State Department's treatment of its own "Anonymous Ten," who, only a couple of years ago, were dismissed with prejudice, without benefit of charge or hearing? Is the lynching of a reputation less reprehensible when done in private than when done in public? Does an injury cease to be an injury because it is done in the executive branch of the Government rather than the legislative?

Is Senator McCarthy really the villain of the piece? Who set in motion the irresponsible forces upon which he is now attempting to capitalize in such an outrageous manner? Certainly not the Senator alone.

* * * *

THERE IS a famous old English lawsuit well known to even first-year law school students. It is popularly known as the "Squib Case." The following are the facts as reported in the record of the case:

"On the evening of the fairday at Milborne Port, October 28, 1770, the defendant threw a lighted squib made of gun powder, etc., from the street into the market-house . . . where a large concourse of people were assembled, which lighted squib, so thrown by the defendant fell upon the standing of one Yates, who sold gingerbread, etc. That one Willis, instantly, and to prevent injury to himself and said wares of the said Yates, took up the lighted squib from off the said standing, and then threw it across said market-house when it fell upon another standing there of one Ryal, who sold the same sort of wares, who instantly, and to save his own goods from being injured, took up the said lighted squib from off the said standing, and then threw it to another part of said market-house, and in so throwing it struck the plaintiff, then in said market-house, in the face therewith, and the combustible matter then bursting, put out one of the plaintiff's eyes."

The defendant pleaded that he had had no intention of injuring the plaintiff and, in fact, he, himself, had not done so because the squib in the last instance had been thrown by Ryal. But the court rejected this argument saying, in effect, that one who irresponsibly sets a dangerous force in motion cannot be heard to say that he did not intend the consequences of his action.

* * * *

THE THROWING of lighted squibs is becoming an increasingly popular sport. Senator McCarthy did not invent it nor is he engaging in it all by himself.

This sport had been out of favor since the Palmer Raids. Martin Dies and J. Parnell Thomas revived it. Now it is given official indorsement by order of the President himself. It is high time that this indorsement be withdrawn.

Spies are not caught by loyalty oaths and loyalty hearings any more than they are caught by Senator McCarthy's sensational methods. They are caught by careful police work concentrated upon the points of danger.

The fear of ideas has no place in our form of Government. If we really fear that the ideas upon which this country was founded are too feeble to hold their own against "foreign ideologies" we may as well close up shop and go out of business as a democratic society. If it is spies and saboteurs we fear, then we had better take our police off the job of prying into political beliefs and associations and let them concentrate on the kind of work that police are supposed to do.

Under the Loyalty Order about three million people have been checked for their "disloyal" tendencies. Thousands have been put through the star chamber ordeal of loyalty hearings and not a single spy or saboteur has been brought to light.

* * * *

IF THE present wave of hysterical witch-hunting continues, the confidence of the people of this country in their own Government may well be destroyed. It is already badly shaken. The President can do much toward restoring confidence by announcing to the world that the Government is not infested with disloyal people, and by demonstrating the sincerity of his statement by withdrawing Executive Order 9835. Nothing will more effectively take the wind out of the sails of the McCarthys.

The politics of fear is a dangerous game and those who play it must accept the responsibility for its consequences. Sometimes, with a sort of poetic justice, they become their own victims.

CLIFFORD J. DURR.

WHY MUST the State Department, or any other Government agency, for that matter, hire persons who have ever been Communists, fellow travelers, Leftist sympathizers or attached to any group now or ever subversive? Aren't there enough smart men and women, good Americans, who have always been good Americans, to fill these positions? I.Q.X.
Washington.

Senator McCarthy is a bachelor, and possibly does not know what is involved under the term "a thorough housecleaning." I should like to enlighten him.

All normal activity ceases. The house is turned upside down from top to bottom. Meals appear at irregular hours. People who make an innocent approach for business or social purposes find themselves turned unceremoniously away. Everyone snaps at everyone else and, the head of the house (female) goes around wearing a martyred expression and a smudge on her nose for days at a time.

When the dreadful period is over, most of the old things which were turned out of the attic or basement were found to have some use after all, and are returned to their former resting places. In a week or two things return to normal, and no one would ever know that there had been a housecleaning.

Of course up-to-date housewives don't have this kind of housecleaning any more. They exercise unceasing vigilance against the acquisition of rubbish in the first place, and daily and weekly clean-ups take care of the rest. They never have to turn their homes into scenes of confusion and disorder because they have never let dirt accumulate.

It is my impression that Mr. Acheson is this kind of housekeeper. And Senator McCarthy is attempting to disrupt his household in search of dirt that was kept out or thrown out years ago. HOUSEWIFE.

Ban Asked on Census Questions on Income

Rees said such things "do not belong to the public" and that the questions are unnecessary.

"To permit census enumerators to pry into the private affairs of individuals is carrying things a little too far," Rees said.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Tactics Of Terror

BERLIN.—It is all too easy to discover the central development in this gray and battered city that is still the greatest single political prize in Europe. Here in Berlin, the Kremlin is unveiling wholly new and most ominous tactics may be inferred from the plans for a gigantic Berlin rally of the "Freie Deutsche Jugend."

The basic facts are simple enough. The Freie Deutsche Jugend is the German Communist youth organization. In the Soviet zone of Germany, it has simply replaced the Hitler Youth, using many of the same facilities and even employing a number of the Nazi youth leaders. Over-all, the EDJ claims one million members.

On May 28, during the traditional German Whitsuntide festival, no less than 500,000 of the older members of the Freie Deutsche Jugend are to march on Berlin. Under the pretext of holding a "peace" rally in the Olympic stadium, they are to invade the western sectors of the city. They are to intimidate west Berlin's strongly anti-Communist inhabitants. And they are to flout and undermine American, British and French authority.

The whole ambitious project is, significantly, being militarily organized. Those in charge are staff officers of the "Main Administration for Training"—which is another way of saying the new German army that the Russians are creating in Germany. A tremendous investment is being made in the project. Hostels are being provided, for example, for Frei Deutsche Jugend members living within hiking distance of Berlin, while trucks have already been requisitioned from the entire industry of the Soviet zone to transport more distant recruits.

EVEN MORE serious, all the "Main Administration for Training's" more dependable officer candidates and NCO trainees have been ordered to take part. This means that the otherwise unwieldy mass of the Freie Deutsche Jugend will be stiffened by more than 30,000 troops under military orders and command. These troops and the youth of the east zone are to "take Berlin together," according to a recent speech of Gerhart Eisler's.

It must be added, of course, that the projected May rally in Berlin will probably not turn out in the end to be so dangerous as the foregoing facts might suggest. Lord Mayor Reuter, with his customary cool courage, has warned that he will stand for no nonsense. The Berlin police have been strengthened. The American, British and French commanders on the spot have powerfully supported Reuter. If necessary additional troops will be flown into the city to keep order.

If this firm allied front is maintained, most informed observers believe that the May rally plans will be sharply modified at the last moment, despite Eisler's boast. Nonetheless, it says volumes about Soviet intentions in Germany, that such a project should have been launched at all. Moreover, it is also known that the Soviets mean to follow the May rally, during the summer, with a series of other, comparable attacks on the Western position in Berlin.

BEHIND all this, in turn, is the crucial change in Soviet tactics already referred too. In the face of appalling unemployment and other difficulties, the people of west Berlin have thus far stood absolutely firm against all Soviet pressure and persuasion. Here, far more than in the rest of western Europe, the classical Communist tactics of penetration and infiltration have utterly failed. What the Kremlin is therefore doing is to take a leaf out of the no doubt well-thumbed book of Adolf Hitler. The new Soviet tactics of terror—of "Schrecklichkeit."

The new aim of the Soviet planners is to impress the people of west Berlin with Russian strength and Western weakness. The conviction is to be implanted that the Americans, British and French can never, in the long run, defend the Berliners from the naked menace of Soviet power. Thus the Soviet planners quite reasonably hope to generate the mood of fear and resignation that Hitler's great exhibitions of Nazi power generated everywhere in Europe during the 30s.

In that mood, appeasement was born and can be born again. By re-creating that mood, the Kremlin obviously hopes to secure the final submission of Berlin first and later of all west Germany. This is a development with more than local, with truly European meaning. For the day will certainly come when these same tactics of terror will be effective all over western Europe if the Western world continues to be weak while the Soviet empire builds military power on a scale far surpassing Hitler's.

Newsweek looks at Life Insurance

RECENTLY members of Newsweek magazine's editorial staff interviewed Mr. Leroy A. Lincoln, President of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, on the subject of Life insurance.

The tremendous role that Life insurance plays in the national economy, and the interesting institutional material developed during the discussion, are so important that a motion picture has been made of this interview. This film will be given wide distribution in line with Metropolitan's "Open Book" policy.

Naturally, in reply to questions from the editors, Mr. Lincoln made many references to Metropolitan's achievements in 1949. In fact, the interview developed the information that is customarily included in the Annual Report to Policyholders. Accordingly, a complete transcript has been printed as the Company's Report for 1949. Here are some of the highlights of that report:

—"Metropolitan . . . paid about $769,000,000 (to beneficiaries and policyholders last year) . . . and I might add further that . . . (this includes) $502,000,000 to living policyholders."

—"For our 33,000,000 policyholders in the United States and Canada, the total Life insurance in force in the Metropolitan at the end of last year was almost $42,000,000,000—an increase of 4 percent over the preceding year."

—"Metropolitan's assets totaled $9,700,000,000, an increase of about 6 percent over the figure for 1948."

—"Through the combined efforts of the many health organizations, the average expectation of life at birth has improved 18 years since 1900. At that time it was about 49 years—while right now it is about 67."

—"Expenses for the Life insurance companies have gone up the same as for everybody else. For example, in the Metropolitan last year they increased about 4 percent . . . insurance in force in Metropolitan has increased about 80 percent since 1939, whereas operating expenses have increased only 71 percent."

—"In 1949, Metropolitan . . . paid $164,000,000 in dividends to policyholders—the largest such amount in the Company's history. Dividends payable to policyholders in 1950 will be somewhat larger in the aggregate than 1949."

—"Dividends would be substantially higher were it not for the low interest returns which have prevailed throughout the United States and Canada. For example, last year the net interest earned on Metropolitan assets was 3.07 percent, compared with 3.03 in 1948, and with 5.18 in 1929."

Metropolitan's Annual Report to Policyholders for 1949 will be sent to anyone on request. In addition, copies of the film may be borrowed for showing by local business, civic, or other groups in which Metropolitan policyholders are interested.

Durant, Sloan Cited In GM Success Story

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

In 1949 General Motors earned 656 million dollars, the largest profit ever recorded by an American corporation. It also gave employment to 401,000 persons and turned out nearly 2,800,000 motor vehicles in the United States and Canada. This is a corporate success story without parallel.

The history of General Motors can be summed up in the lives of two men, William C. Durant, its founder, and Alfred P. Sloan, jr., one of the managerial geniuses of our times.

"Billy" Durant was a man who made five fortunes in his lifetime, and died a bankrupt. A carriage maker who had bought control of Buick, he organized the merger of his company with Oldsmobile, Oakland, Cadillac and several other motor companies whose names are now forgotten.

The new company, General Motors of New Jersey, swallowed so many car makers that within two years it had a case of acute corporate indigestion, and was forced to mortgage all its assets to hard-bargaining Eastern bankers. One of the conditions of their loan was that Durant get out.

But the fabulous Durant put his money into a new light car called Chevrolet, which proved to be the Cinderella of the automobile industry. Within five years Chevrolet had bought control of General Motors, and Durant was once more master of the corporation.

In 1920 he lost final control of the company to E. I. duPont de Nemours, which held, (and still holds) nearly a quarter of the common stock. Durant went on to make two more fortunes, in cars and in Wall Street, and General Motors settled down into a sedate period of growth and consolidation without the benefit of his flamboyant and somewhat disorganized talents.

Since 1920 the destinies of GM have been guided by Alfred P. Sloan. If Durant was daring and intuitive, Sloan has been brilliant and careful.

GM's success under Sloan has been that of flexible centralized management. He set up a system of common accounting and reports from all divisions and dealers in the country, and policy planning was put in the hands of top executive committees. At the same time, operational decisions are made autonomously by the forty-seven worldwide units which make up the corporation.

During the depression, while Ford lost $132 million and Chrysler $11 million, General Motors, with sales declining 80 percent, still made money in every single year of operation. In the five prewar years, average profit on sales was nearly 12 percent.

Its public relations, too, continued good, except for the violent years of labor organization when the United Auto Workers, in their drive for union organization, sat down in the Fisher and Chevrolet plants in Flint, Michigan.

Is General Motors too big? There is no easy answer to such a question.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., pointing to the more than 1800 auto companies which have failed, thinks a firm should be large enough to distribute the risk of making cars.

There are those, however, who believe the corporation has grown larger than efficiency alone would dictate. Not only does GM make Chevrolets, Pontiacs, Oldsmobiles, Buicks, Cadillacs, Yellow Trucks and Coaches, and dozens of auto accessories, it has branched into many unrelated fields.

It makes aircraft engines, parts for ships, tractor equipment, bicycle brakes, electric refrigerators, kitchen ranges, automatic stokers, water heaters, freezers, air-conditioners, furnaces, radios, television sets, locomotives, electric water systems, vacuum cleaners, automatic washing machines and home ironers. The General Motors Acceptance Corp. is the world's largest financer of auto sales, and GM's insurance subsidiaries the largest insurers of automobiles.

Some of these divisions were the result of mergers, some of purchase, and others of development within the corporation. Since 1928 GM has plowed back nearly $1.2 billion of its earnings, over half of it in the last four years.

Possibly the greatest argument against such concentrated economic power is its effect on the labor market. Employment in GM dropped from 233,000 in 1929 to 116,000 in 1932. The company was able to make profits only at the expense of drastic layoffs.

It would be Utopian to suppose America could have become the world's leading producer of motor cars had those 1800 small companies somehow managed to survive. England's experience with excessive models proves the contrary.

The Shoes Fit and Judge Grants Husband Divorce

Chicago, March 21 (AP). — The pair of shoes that Joseph Hernandez brought into court helped win him a divorce yesterday.

Hernandez, 42, had filed a cross-bill charging his wife, Lucille, 32, with adultery with John Villasenior, 25.

David Linn, Hernandez' attorney, told Circuit Judge Elmer J. Schnackenberg this story:

Hernandez found Villasenior under his wife's bed. While Hernandez was out looking for a policeman, Villasenior fled—but left his shoes. The husband produced them in court, and the Judge ordered Villasenior to try them on.

"They're a bit tight," Villasenior said, but Linn pointed out that Villasenior was wearing wool socks.

Hernandez, a steel worker, was granted the divorce and custody of four of the five children.

Ousted Mine Union Official Arms Self Against Threats

Canton, Ill., March 21 (AP).—An ousted United Mine Workers officer armed himself today and said he is prepared to meet any threats by union men.

Lloyd H. Sidener, ousted president of the Canton UMW local, declared last week that John L Lewis sent secret signals down the ranks of the miners to continue their recent coal strike. The FBI is investigating.

Sidener said he was driving down Canton's main street yesterday when a car driven by a UMW member charged toward his. He said he narrowly escaped a collision by swerving sharply.

"I know it was a threat," Sidener said. "I know the individual who was driving the car, and I had two witnesses with me."

Sidener said he expected further incidents.

"I have a loaded shotgun and a loaded .38 in my home," he said. "If the boys want to come up, they're welcome. The first one to open my front door, I'll kill. You can put that in the papers."

Sidener has filed charges of unfair labor practices against the union with the National Labor Relations Board. He said that along with his expulsion, the union fined him $50,000 for attempting to lead a back-to-work movement during the strike.

Rep. Church Dies on 'Hill'

he slumped in the chair. It was about 10:35 a. m.

House Majority Leader John McCormack ordered Church laid out on the floor. Five minutes later Dr. Richard A. Stutsman of the Capitol clinical staff pronounced Church dead.

The tragic incident closed the hearing. The House adjourned for the day out of respect to Church's memory.

Mrs. Harold Cooley, wife of the North Carolina Democratic Congressman, who was at the Capitol at the time, rushed to the Women's Congressional Club to inform Mrs. Church of her husband's death. Mrs. Church is president of the club.

The club immediately canceled all activities for the remainder of the week.

Many House associates paid warm tribute to Church on and off the floor yesterday.

McCormack said it was apparent Church was under a great strain as he testified. "He obviously put in many hours," said McCormack. "There is no question but that he died in line of duty."

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.) said he felt Church "was overcome by emotion."

Church's staff said he worked all weekend on his testimony, until 9:30 p. m. Monday night.

Church, elected seven times to the House from Illinois' Thirteenth District, was a member of the subcommittee on District appropriations. Last year he ardently supported the District sales tax measure to meet an impending deficit.

The veteran Congressman was known by his colleagues for his persistent economy appeals.

Church, a lawyer, was born on a farm near Catlin, Vermillion County, Ill., educated at the University of Michigan and received his law degree from Northwestern University in 1909.

He was elected several times to the Illinois Legislature, beginning in 1916. He was a Navy lieutenant commander from 1938 to 1941.

Church was first elected to the House of Representatives in 1934. He was returned for three consecutive terms, interrupting his string for an unsuccessful bid for the senatorial nomination in 1940. He was elected to the House again in 1942 anad has served in the last four Congresses.

The Congressman was married to Marguerite Stitt of New York City in 1918. They had three children: Ralph Edwin, jr., 29, a Chicago patent attorney; William S., 26, a broker in Chicago, and Marjory, 21, a Wellesley College senior. The Churches lived at the Shoreham.

Church's body, now at Hines Funeral Home, 2901 14th st. nw, will be taken to the Churches' home Wednesday evening..

tion plan as a move to cut down the Taft-Hartley Act by "indirection" after failing to repeal the statute last spring.

Church collapsed and died of a heart attack while delivering, in vigorous speech, his arguments against Reorganization Plan No. 12 in a hearing before the House Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments. The Illinois Republican was the first witness to testify on his resolution rejecting the President's plan.

On the other side of Capitol Hill Senator Taft announced he would sponsor a similar resolution, and denounced the reorganization plan as "political," aimed at "nullifying" the Taft-Hartley Act.

Last year, during the bitter fight over the Administration's fruitless attempt to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act, Senator Taft got his own amendments to the law adopted by the Senate. One would have eliminated the "independent general counsel" of the NLRB, but the Taft amendments were not approved by the House.

As an "independent" division of the NLRB, the general counsel—Robert N. Denham—has the autonomous power of issuing complaints of unfair labor practices and of prosecuting the complaints. The board itself then serves as a judicial body to judge the charges.

This separation of powers of the board and its general counsel has been under attack by opponents of the Taft-Hartley Act as one of the principal weaknesses of the law. The counsel and the board have not been getting along well with each other, and only recently Denham accused the board of trying by its decisions to undermine the Taft-Hartley Act in favor of the unions and against employers.

"We did not have time, however, to prepare the proper amendments, and I hoped that the House might do so when it came to consider the (Taft's) bill.

Taft attacked the President's Reorganization Plan No. 12 on four grounds:

1. It is not in accord with the Hoover Commission recommendations.

2. It attempts to reverse by executive action a basic matter of policy determined by Congress three years ago in the Taft-Hartley Act.

3. It proposes an unsound mixing of the prosecuting and judicial functions of the NLRB "similar to that responsible for the greatest miscarriages of justice this country has even seen under the Wagner Act."

4. It is an attempt to use the Hoover Commission report "for political purposes."

Yesterday, Taft explained his about-face on the issue of "independent general counsel" as follows:

"As part of a general effort to compromise the proposal to repeal the law, and hoping to secure unanimous agreement from the minority in the Labor Committee, I agreed last year with great doubt to the subordination of the general counsel to the board. But I never would have agreed to the transfer of his powers to the chairman (Paul M. Herzog).

Taft asserted that President Truman had demonstrated the "greatest reluctance" in enforcing the Taft-Hartley Act in the recent coal strike.

Airport Overpass Rejected

A $1,050,000 proposed Federal appropriation to build an overpass for motor traffic from the Washington National Airport to U. S. Route 1 was rejected yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee.

In its report on the omnibus Federal appropriation bill, the committee declared there is no question about the proposed overpass being needed.

But it said the project should be taken up with Virginia State officials "so as to have it constructed under the Federal aid postwar highway development program."

For the airport, the committee approved $1,300,000 for operating and maintenance expenses, a cut of $55,000 below the budget proposed; and $540,000 for construction, of which $45,000 is for two metal sheds and the rest for fueling facilities.

What Youth Gives, It Can Take, Says Alice, Talking of Pensions

By J. A. Livingston

THE Walrus carried a golf club and wore a green coverall, on which was painted bunkers, sand traps, red flags and tees. As he reached the center of the stage, the cheers rose.

The White Queen tittered. Her mind rushed back to the depression days of Tom Thumb golf. "I think he has the prize won now," she said to the Carpenter.

"Wait till you see Alice," advised the Carpenter.

Livingston

The Lobster's turn was next. He wore a top hat, smoked a big cigar, and carried a bundle of railroads and banks under his right arm, a bundle of factories and public utility plants under the left arm, and both hands were crammed with money. Again cheers. Again a smile of memory from the White Queen. "Ah, Monopoly," she cried.

In quick succession came the Mad Hatter, dressed like a flapper; the Oyster wearing overalls and silk shirt, signifying the workingman after the first World War; the March Hare wearing a four-button Brooks Brothers suit, representing Joe College, class of '25, and the Red Queen, hobbling along in a tight Recent Look skirt, in contrast to the old New Look.

Then came Alice. She blinked through spectacles, held a trumpet to her ear, leaned on a cane, and walked with difficulty. Her hair was white and straggly.

"And what fad is that?" asked the White Queen, bewildered.

"Old age," said the Carpenter. "The very latest American fad! She's 65."

THE AUDIENCE caught on when Alice held up a pension check. Cheers and laughter.

The judges of the Fad Contest went into a huddle.

"She's only the beginning of a fad," argued the Red Queen. "Why, today there are eight persons of working age to each person who's 65 years. In 1975 the proportion will be five to one. Not till then will America be in Pensionland."

The judges came out of their huddle, went into a T formation, and burst into an unmetrical decision:

Hurrah for John L. Lewis, and hurrah for Murray too,
They want pensions for the many, 'stead of riches for the few;
Hurrah for Grace and Fairless, who joined in the advance,
Can't you see them, can't you see them, as they lose their shirt and pants.
When tomorrow comes tomorrow, 'twill be fun to be alive
As we eat, drink, and do nothing at the age of 65,
But tomorrow is tomorrow and today it can't be had,
Old age is far too nouveau, unestablished as a fad.
So the verdict we must render—un-a-dulter-a-ted-ly
Is that Alice and her pensions fail to suit us to a T.

"You'll pay for this!" shouted the Carpenter.

"Not we," said the judges in unison. "We'll be too old. Youth will pay. Twenty-five years from now, you and I will be the young man's burden."

"But he won't be able to bear us," said the Carpenter.

"OH, YES, he will," said Alice. "It's all planned. He'll do it by inflation. Youth will say to youth: 'We want swank automobiles, winters in California and Florida, summers in Maine and Wisconsin now, not when we're old. Instead of our sharing with posterity let posterity share with us.'"

"You mean youth will bring tomorrow to today?" The White Queen was mystified.

"No, the present will discount the promise of the past and pensions will get smaller."

"But I thought pensions were bigger," said the White Queen.

"The bigger something gets, the smaller it must become," announced the Mad Hatter sententiously.

"It's simple," said Alice. "By 1975, Congress will demand high taxes to pay big pensions. Union contracts require high employer contributions to pay supplementary pensions. So unions will demand higher wages to help workers meet high taxes. The corporations will demand higher prices to pay high wages and supplementary pensions."

"Then pensions will still be bigger than ever," protested the perplexed White Queen.

"But the dollar will be smaller," said Alice, "because living costs will be higher. What youth gives, youth can also take away."

"Nonesense, nonesense," exploded the Red Queen. "I demand the prize." She looked for the judges. They were gone.

"I wonder. Was it an economic dream?" said the White Queen. "I wonder if it really happened."

Drug Study Funds Get Approval

A $3,600,000 fund for Government-sponsored research into the uses of two new wonder drugs was approved yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee.

The drugs are ACTH (adrenocorticotropic hormone) and Compound E (cortisone). The committee-approved fund would be used by the National Institutes of Health. Advisory councils of the health institutes recently recommended that all supplies of the two drugs be used solely for research, rather than in medical practice, until the side effects and long term effects can be learned.

The advisory council also recommended animal experimentation, so far as practical. Among reported side effects of the drugs are that they may cause mental disorder and in certain persons may cause diabetes.

Increase of $2,500,000

The $3,600,000 allowed for research with the two drugs was $2,500,00 more than the President's budget asked. The fund was part of the omnibus appropriation bill sent to the House floor for action.

In its report, the House committee pointed out that the relatively recent development of ACTH and Compound E had opened up a whole new field of medicine. The report said the committee had been told the two drugs have given medical researchers tools with greater possibilities than the discoveries of Pasteur in bacteriology. The role of the two hormonal drugs is in endocrinology, the field of medicine concerned with the relations of the glands to the functions of the body.

The House committee said: "Although these drugs' have been available only a short time, studies and experiments thus far indicate that they may have tremendous possibilities in the treatment of rheumatic fever, acute leukemia, certain types of mental diseases, sight defects, and other diseases."

Supply a Problem

Supply of the drugs is now a problem, the committee said. Two companies produce the drugs, have been donating much of their output for experimental use, but can't continue on that basis. Close to $10 million has been reported spent so far to develop the drugs. New sources of supply are being sought, the committee said.

The committee fixed the operating funds of the National Institutes of Health of $15,750,000, including the hormone drug research money; of the National Cancer Institute at $20,086,000; of the Mental Health research program at $9,944,000; of the National Health Institute at $14,150,000, and of the Dental Health research program at $2,040,000.

Funds to complete the White House remodeling, the new Federal Courts building and the new General Accounting Office building here were included in the omnibus appropriation bill presented to the House yesterday.

The bill, sent to the House by its appropriations committee, calls for $3,400,000 to finish the White House renovation, $15,358,194 to finish the new GAO building at 5th and G nw, and $6,000,000 to finish the Federal Courts building at 3d and Constitution ave. nw.

These were the amounts recommended in the President's budget.

The committee chopped $80,000 of the $100,000 requested in the budget for next year's operation of the Commission on Renovation of the Executive Mansion. Of its six members, two were picked from the House Appropriations Committee and two from the Senate Appropriations Committee.

For all that, the House Appropriations Committee's report on its money bill declared that the White House Renovation Commission, with but limited advisory duties, is "greatly overstaffed."

The report said the commission will have $30,000 left from this year to use with the $20,000 additional for next year's expenses.

National Gallery Budget Ordered Cut by $42,000

A $42,000 cut in next year's National Gallery of Art budget was ordered yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee.

But the remainder, $1,158,000, approved by the committee, will permit hiring additional guards needed for protecting 12 new galleries to be opened during the next year.

New Unknown Soldier Tomb Fund Slashed

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday ordered a 50 percent cut in the funds requested for burial of an unknown soldier of World War II.

The Army had asked for $500,000 to build a tomb for the hero, and another $500,000 for entombment and ceremonial expenses. The committee said a suitable tomb could be erected for $350,000 and that $150,000 was enough for the other expenses.

The design of the tomb still is undecided. Col. George Hinman of the Army's Memorial Division, reports preliminary plans are under study by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson.

Man's Death By Poisoning Investigated

The police homicide squad was called in to investigate the cyanide poisoning death yesterday morning of Max Boimblatt, 46, a watch crystal repair man with offices at 527 9th st. nw.

Boimblatt was stricken at 10 a. m. yesterday in his office and was pronounced dead 50 minutes later, police said.

District Coroner Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald performed an autopsy after learning that Boimblatt had no history of previous illness. He determined death to be from cyanide poisoning, and withheld a death certificate.

Homicide squad detectives reported that cyanide solution was used by Patrick Reddington, a watch repairman, who shared offices with Boimblatt.

Reddington was not in the office at the time of Boimblatt's death, police said, but a glass containing the cyanide solution was found next to Boimblatt's desk.

Caps Lose to New York, 90-87, in Exciting Finish

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

SARASOTA, FLA., March 21.—Joe McCarthy is on the spot again with his Red Sox. Again, he is supposed to win the pennant with what people say is the best team in the American League. They have been saying it in the springtime since 1948, but no pennant has flown in Fenway Park since McCarthy took the job.

He hopes the peepul are right about his 1950 ball club, but clearly it's getting annoying to him, all this finger pointing that labels McCarthy a flop unless his Red Sox do finish on top. Privately, McCarthy has more worries than you think.

POVICH

At a time when they point to his Bostons as the best-hitting club in the league, deeper in pitching than any other, and seasoned with enough veterans to keep mistakes to a minimum, McCarthy is wondering whether they deserve all the accolades.

There are chinks in the Red Sox that don't make McCarthy happy, Vern Stephens, the shortstop who doesn't go to his right, is one, and on the other side of second base Bobby Doerr is suspect in the sense he isn't the same fine ball player of his younger days.

DOERR IS recognizing his own failure of last year, when he slowed up both at bat and in the field. He actually cost the Red Sox the pennant with his slack play in the first couple of months, though he made a brave bid to win it back for 'em in the final weeks.

Doerr finally wound up with a .309 batting average, but as of June 7, last season, he was hitting an anemic .207. The Red Sox never did recover the ground they lost to the Yanks in those early months. In the show-down series with the Yankees at the end of the season, Doerr was the most productive hitter on the Boston club but he couldn't swing it single-handedly.

This year, Doerr gave up his fishing vacation early to move East with his family and get in shape. He never bothered about applying himself so early in previous years—it wasn't necessary—but there were times last season when he looked like the oldest 31-year-old in baseball. McCarthy feels that Doerr must do a come-back to do the Red Sox much good.

IN FORMER SEASONS, there was always an easy "out" for McCarthy if the Sox didn't win the pennant. It was acknowledged that his pitching wasn't much, but at the same time the Red Sox defense and hitting was supposed to carry the club. Now, McCarthy finds that he has no pitching "out."

All of a sudden the Boston pitching flowered last year as something tremendous. Mel Parnell came with a rush and was a 25-game winner. Venerable Ellis Kinder won 23. The Sox had two of the league's four 20-game winners. Young Chuck Stobbs won 11, lost only 6, after he got a chance to work. Rookie Maurice McDermott, too, was something special.

Thus, in a year when he has pitching, McCarthy has other worries. First base is one of 'em. He liked young Bill Goodman, but that chap doesn't represent much power. He hit only one homer last season, which labels him a weak-sister among the Red Sox slugging crew. If anything happens to Goodman, there is no first base replacement.

DESPITE HIS on-the-spot status, McCarthy has mellowed a bit, is more interviewable than in former seasons when baseball writers gave him a wide berth on the theory he wouldn't talk anyway. These days, he gives them a refreshing run-down on his club, speculates openly who may or may not make good for him.

It's a contrast with last season, when McCarthy and the correspondents were snapping at each other. They castigated him for his lack of comment, and he maintained his smugness. Finally, one day in St. Louis, McCarthy announced, "Goodman is our first baseman from here in."

At this piece of news, one reporter interjected "I wrote that yesterday."

"Okay, if you know so much about my plans," barked McCarthy, "tell me where Goodman is going to bat in my lineup."

All Pearce Has to Do to Stick Is Beat Yanks Today

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 21.—For everybody else in the world, tomorrow will be March 22 but for Jim Pearce of the Nats it's his day to bow in or out of the major leagues.

Bucky Harris is sending the 6-foot-6 righthander from Charlotte against the Yankees at Tinker Field, along with Sid Hudson. It's Pearce's opportunity to make the big jump from Charlotte.

The elongated rookie is a special case in the Nats camp. Harris, eager to beat the Yankee team that fired him as manager a couple of years ago, is subordinating the temptation to shoot veteran pitchers at the Yanks, and is giving Pearce the chance.

It's not without reason. The big fellow has been impressive with his smart work in two previous outings, and Harris rates him highly. If he can play any part in a win over the Yanks, Harris will embrace him.

Pearce Weakens

"I think it's a question of how far Pearce can go," said Harris. "They tell me that at Charlotte last year he was a whizz for six or seven innings. That shows he can pitch a little bit. If we can put some more meat on his frame, he may have the lasting ability. He'll eat better with us."

What Harris likes chiefly about Pearce is his poise, and his varied overhand, side-arm delivery. "He'll give those right-handed hitters a hard time of it, I think," said Harris.

The first stage of experimentation is over in the Nats' camp, and Harris is ready to junk a couple of ideas he had during the long winter months when he plotted the Washington lineup.

"I was hoping we'd have enough starting pitchers to use Mickey Harris in the relief job where he might do the most good," said Harris, "but now I doubt it. With our pitching situation what it is, Harris will have to start for us.

"I want to give him that break anyway. His attitude was so fine when I asked him to step down to relief pitching that he deserves all the consideration we can give him. Right now, I'd say that Ray Scarborough and Harris are our two best pitchers."

On another score, his outfield, Harris has revised his plans. He was hopeful of installing a regular outfield of Gil Coan, Irv Noren and Sam Mele and letting it stand against all kinds of pitching if it could produce.

"I'd say that's out now," said Harris. "Looks as if I'll have to play the percentages. We're going to face so many lefthanders I may have to get Coan out of there and use Clyde Vollmer, especially in the early weeks when Vollmer hits well. Ed Stewart will move in for Mele when we're facing right-handers."

That all meant, he admitted, that Rookie Irv Noren would be in the regular lineup against all types of pitching. "I have to go along with Noren. He showed me so much on the Coast last year. Lefthanders didn't bother him. He represents too much power."

IN SHORT: Forty percent stockholder John J. Jachym, Clark Griffith's unwanted partner, watched the workout today at Tinker Field as Griffith's guest . . . Griffith was polite to him, but is making no move to invite Jachym into the club's official family . . . The cordiality was so noticeable it could never be suspected that Griff wishes Jachym were in the rug business in Iran, or somewhere . . . Harris gave Eddie Yost and Irv Noren his 60-minute men who have played every game, the day off—Yost was at the park in civvies, nevertheless . . . Little Willy Miranda, the Cuban shortstop, was shunted back to Chattanooga today . . . Gil Coan won't play against the Yanks tomorrow; his side muscles still bother him.

Byrne, Page Collaborate On 6-Hitter, Yanks Win

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 21 (AP).—Tommy Byrne, making his first appearance of the exhibition season, and Joe Page, held the Boston Braves to six hits today as the New York Yankees triumphed, 4 to 2.

Byrne, working the first four innings, gave up only one blow, a single by Sid Gordon. Then Page stepped the rest of the way and allowed the Braves two runs, one a homer by Roy Hartsfield.

That shot tied the score at 2-all in the top of the eighth but in the same inning the Yankees hopped on Johnny Antonelli for two runs with the help of a pass, a double by Hank Bauer and a single by Billy Johnson.

The defeat was the Braves eighth setback in a row.

Indianapolis Barely Wins

Indianapolis, March 21 (AP). — The Indianapolis Olympians just squeezed out an 86-85 victory over Sheboygan tonight in the opener of their best-of-three series in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Milt Schoon pulled the Redskins within one point on two free throws with five seconds to go, but Indianapolis took the ball on the tipoff and used up the time.

The Olympians held a halftime lead of 45-39 but fell behind at 62-59 at the three-quarter mark.

Jack Burmaster, whose late scoring kept Sheboygan in the game, was high with 19 points. Ralph Beard led Indianapolis with 17.

U. S. Figure Skating Meet Opens Today

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Washington becomes the capital of American figure skating today for the first time with the national championships opening at Chevy Chase Ice Palace this morning, at 8 o'clock.

The scene shifts to Uline Arena tomorrow, Friday and Saturday with near capacity crowds expected for the last three days.

Dick Button, 20-year-old Harvard sophomore, three-time world champ, and Yvonne Sherman, 19, of New York, will defend their senior men's and women's titles.

Miss Sherman will have the spotlight practically to herself today since Button's event doesn't begin until tomorrow.

Novice men's competition opens the show at 8 this morning, followed by the novice ladies at 12:15 p. m., and finally Miss Sherman and the senior ladies from 4 until 7 p. m.

Easy Program Today

Today's program will be pretty cut and dried with the contestants performing routine school figures, the basic geometric ice patterns.

Those who pass today's tests will be given an opportunity to improvise their own routines in the free skating competition during the last three days.

Eighteen States and the District of Columbia have entered 125 skaters. When the event moves to Uline, about 50 Congressmen will be on hand to add dignity.

Each of the contestants qualified for the nationals by finishing fourth or better in sectional tournaments.

Miss Sherman, who took third place in the world championships in London two months ago, is expected to retain her national title.

Her chief opposition will come from Sonia Klopfer of New York, who took fifth in the world event, Virginia Baxter of Detroit, Andra McLaughlin of Colorado Springs and Helen Geeke of St. Louis.

Two of the youngest competitors are expected to dominate the novice ladies, 11-year-old Elly Sonneman and 10-year-old Carol Heiss, both of New York.

George Pettinger, jr., of Lake Placid, Bill Remmon of Philadelphia and 13-year-old David Jenkins are the top men's novice competitors.

Evers Hits Two Homers, Bosox Beaten

Lakeland, Fla., March 21 (AP).—Hoot Evers hit a pair of homers and Johnny Groth added another as the Detroit Tigers slugged out an 11-5 win over the Boston Red Sox today.

The Detroiters, who have posted four straight wins over American League opposition, pounded out 14 hits off Rookies Bob Gillespie and Jim McDonald.

Each of Evers homers came with a Tiger on base, one in the fifth inning and the other in the eighth. Two Detroiters were on the sacks when Groth hit for the circuit.

Freddy Hutchinson held the Bosox to one run through the first five innings, but they ganged up on Reliefer Marv Grissom for four more, three of them in the eighth inning. Ted Williams and Bobby Doerr hit consecutive triples to highlight that rally.

Teams Shift To Garden Tonight for Second Game

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

The aging Caps received the cruelest nick of all from New York last night at Uline Arena.

The visitors, victors in five of six regular season games, beat them out 90-87, in an exciting finish to the first National Basketball Association playoff game between the two.

Last night's game could well be Washington's farewell appearance here this year.

Their backs to the wall, the Caps now have to beat the Knicks at Madison Square Garden tonight, then repeat there Saturday afternoon to remain in the playoffs.

Caps-Knicks Broadcast

The Washington-New York playoff game tonight will be broadcast locally by radio station WWDC, 1260 kilocycles, starting at 9:30 p. m.

Reiser Ties

A howling crowd that sounded a lot larger than the official count of 1834 was with the hard-fighting Caps right down to the wire. Unfortunately for them, so were the hard-running New Yorkers.

With less than two minutes to play, Chick Reiser, who missed 10 previous attempts, sank his first field goal to tie the game at 84-all.

New York played it cagily, to freeze for the one decisive shot. Coach Bob Feerick, who guarded high-scoring Carl Braun magnificently throughout the first half, fouled him.

Braun, with his peculiar skip and jump shot, proceeded to drop his twelfth foul goal in 14 attempts to put New York ahead for good.

All the excitement in a game that was tense all the way wasn't over. With 45 seconds left, Feerick committed his sixth personal foul on Dick McGuire and the Caps were down two points.

Then Tex Ritter got loose for a field goal but the Caps still had a dying gasp. Freddie Scolari sank a foul goal and Don Otten tapped in a basket in the last seconds to again come within a point.

In the ensuing melee, Reiser got another shot that might have won the game but it was short.

Braun Is Big Difference

In the final analysis, it was Braun who made the usual difference between the teams. Held to two baskets in the first half, he wound up with seven and his excellent foul-shooting gave him a 26-point total.

Feerick's early effort and the personals he committed left it up to Dick O'Keefe and Leo Katkaveck to try to cope with Braun most of the second half.

Early in the game, when Braun was being stopped, Vince Boryla was the New York villain. He scored 13 of his 20 points in the first period.

The Caps threw away a couple of opportunities to sew up the game. In the fourth period, after Freddie Scolari went on a 7-point binge, they led by 80-71. Scolari was a second-half sensation, and led the Caps scorers with 23 points.

Big Don Otten was runnerup with 20 and Chuck Halbert tallied 13. Dick O'Keefe, who had nine, teamed with Halbert to give the Caps a 45-35 lead in the second period that they also dissipated.

Truckers Express 'Grave' Insult To Wondrous Nats

By The Associated Press

The trucking outfit, owned by President Jim Clark of the pro football Eagles, sent out a calender for 1950. At the top it listed the addresses and phone numbers of all the major league baseball and football clubs.

"George Washington Cemetery."

49er Shows Quarterbacks How

Albert 'Lens' Deception to Navy T

Frank Tries to Fool Foes and Camera Too

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., March 21.—In a left-handed way, Quarterback Frankie Albert is showing Navy's quarterbacks how to do things right.

The San Francisco Forty-Niners' southpaw sleight-of-hand artist, here to instruct Middie field generals for two weeks, has a fool proof system of knowing when he's executed a good fake.

"When I see the game pictures and notice that the cameramen were unable to follow the ball, then I know I made a good fake. But if the camera never loses the ball, I know that I didn't even fool the photographer, much less the opposition."

Albert's treatise on football legerdemain today was part of a discourse he's delivering to Navy's four quarterbacks, Bob Zastrow, Mike Sorrestino, Bob Cameron and Les Etchinson.

Eddie Erdelatz, the new Navy head coach who was in charge of the Forty Niner linemen last year, listened attentively to Albert and remarked:

"I hope our quarterbacks run up the Navy's photography bill next fall with a lot of film with nothing on it."

Concerning passing, Albert has this to say:

"Don't take chances when your receivers are covered. If you must throw the ball, overshoot or undershoot the covered receiver by 5 yards. In that way, you lose only the down, but not the ball.

"Me? I'm always taking chances, but it's not good football. It's often disastrous. When I pass, I'm throwing for a 20-yard gain or a touchdown. I overshoot or undershoot by about only a yard—habit. I guess—hoping that the receiver can wiggle away.

"Knowing when to pass is just as important as knowing when not to pass. Don't pass simply because you called a pass play in the huddle, wait and see what develops.

"If the opposition has you tabbed as a non-running quarback, they've got you 50 percent licked. If they know you're not going to run when your receivers are covered they simply drift back, cover the receiver and wait for you to pass. The result is often an interception. Thats not good.

"Couple of years ago, our scouts told us Otto Graham, of Cleveland, wouldn't run. Boy did he fool our scouts and us. We covered his two ends, Mac Speedie and Dante Lavelli, but that didn't stop Otto. He drifted back and instead of passing, he ran. Wound up as the day's leading ground gainer and Cleveland wound up with the ball game."

Too many quarterbacks are stereotyped, Albert also told the Middies field generals. "Don't become known as a third down passing quarterback. Coax the defense and make believe you'll pass on third with about seven to go. Then call a running play, usually inside since the defense will probably be spread, expecting you to pass."

It Doesn't Pay To Gamble, He Says

Albert, 5 feet 9, weighs only 170 today—5 pounds over his normal playing weight, giving lie to the general belief that the pro game is only for giants.

"The T-formation has made it a little man's game, too," the Forty Niner wizard said. "What do I think about Eddie Lebaron? Only saw him play once, but he's clever and can do tricks with the ball. He ought to do well with the Washington Redskins."

And what does Albert think his Frisoon Forty Niners will do with the Redskins when they clash in an exhibition August 20 in San Francisco?

"Cleveland was the only team in the old All-America Conference better than we were," he said, "and I think Cleveland could have beaten the Philadelphia Eagles. They were the National League champs, weren't they? I think we'll do all right."

Rough Ordy Shows Old Mare Is What She Used to Be

$3.40 Shot Breezes in By 6 Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., March 21. With every post a winning one, J. T. Gibson's Rough Ordy made it two straight victories here and proved the day's third odds-on favorite to score. The 7-year-old mare performed in the Falls Church Purse, featuring the Tuesday program, and coasted into the wire six lengths ahead of her closest rival.

Highland Farm's High Hunch, like the winner carrying 122 pounds, was second in the Indian file parade to the finish line. Four lengths back came S. B. Webb's Majeto to be third in the field of six. Richard Pending's Mr. D., was a late scratch.

Rough Ordy who won 8 of 18 races and $10,700 last year returned a $3.40 mutuel and was clocked in 1:27 for the about 7 furlongs. Nick Shuk put up a steadying ride on the daughter of Swashbuckler. The track was sloppy as the result of torrential rain last night.

The action proved a futile chase by five horses and Rough Ordy. The old mare bounded out of the gate on top and for all intents and purposes it was all over but the pay-off. Majeto made a bid and so did High Hunch but at the end Rough Ordy was well within Shuks' grip.

S. H. Rogers' Blue Rocket took his third in a row here and was the fourth odds-on choice to win. Jimmy Baird, riding his second winner of the day, eased the 3-year-old into the wire five lengths in advance of S. Delisi's Queen May. Six lengths farter back came James Stuart's Ranger Mosby to be in the group of seven. The winner paid $2.60 and was clocked in 1:16 for the about 6 furlongs.

In a tight photo finish Irving Beavers' Second Sight was the winner over John Frederick's Lucky Mystery. The mare got up in the last jump to catch the fleet pacemaker. Third Money went to J. I. Losen's Bold Moment in the abbreviated sprint located in fifth position on the program. Second Sight, with Apprentice Mike Sorrentino up, paid $7.60 and was clocked in :50 3/5.

A solid favorite and a third choice figured in the production of a $14.40 daily double pay-off on tickets bearing the numbers 5 and 3.

Mrs. G. O. Russell's Under Cover, backed down to odds on, proved worthy of the support by taking the first race while under the handling of Jimmy Baird, leading rider at the meeting. The 7-year-old charged through the stretch to win by a length and a half from Mrs. Arthur White's Bone Meal, the pacemaker most of the way. E. Rinaldi's Count On was third. The winner paid $3.40 and was clocked in :50 2/5 for the about 4¼ furlongs.

E. B. Lee's Princess Maxim, paying $7.20, supplied the winning punch in the second event.

Lollar's 3-Run Homer in 9th Beats Indians

Burbank, Calif., March 21 (AP)—Catcher Sherman Lollar smashed a three-run homer in the last of the ninth inning today to give the St. Louis Browns a 9 to 6 come-from-behind victory over the Cleveland Indians in an exhibition game.

After six innings, the Browns trailed 6 to 1, largely because the Indians took advantage of seven walks in three innings by Brownie Pitcher Lou Kretlow.

Mike Goliat Leads Parade With Two

Tampa, Fla., March 21 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds couldn't do anything right today and the Philadelphia Phils romped to an easy 14-to-4 exhibition victory.

The Phils clubbed the veteran Howard Fox and Rookies Frank Smith and Jim Avrea for 13 hits, 6 of which were wind-blown homers over the left-field wall.

Mike Goliat led the Phils' hitting with two home runs and two singles and he drove in four runs. Granny Hamner, Del Ennis, Eddie Sanicki and "Puddinhead" Jones also got circuit blows for the Philadelphians.

Vero Beach, Fla., March 21 (AP).—With Bill McCahan making his first start, Brooklyn today defeated the Fort Worth Farm Club, 5-1, in five innings. A cloudburst, which arrived as the Brooks came to bat in the sixth, halted play.

The former no-hit righthander of the Philadelphia Athletics held the Texas Leaguers to one scratch hit in his three innings.

Phil Boss Beefs 'Unofficially'

Bonus Issue Still Has Chandler on Spot

By Red Smith

TAMPA, FLA., March 21 (NYHT).—Several days have passed since Bob Carpenter, the young and forthright president of the Phillies, publicly enumerated the reasons why he felt sure some baseball clubs had been covering up bonus players in violation of the rules. He said, according to a dispatch out of Clearwater, that in at least three instances young players had signed with other teams after rejecting bonuses of $10,000 to $20,000 from the Phillies, yet the team that hired them had not identified them as bonus players.

SMITH

The rules provide that when a free agent receives more than $6000 to sign, he becomes a bonus player subject to special regulations. In view of the scarcity of young ball players, or old newspapermen, who prefer $6000 to $20,000, it is reasonable to assume that a boy will not turn down a fat bonus unless somebody has offered him a fatter one.

If an employer wilfully conceals payment of a bonus, he goes somewhat beyond infraction of a stupid technical rule. He is a plain, bald liar who implicates the boy in the lie. Moralists might consider this less than an ideal beginning for a kid in "the great American sport."

Well, there has been enough time for the Carpenter story to have reached Happy Chandler's attention. Even if he is a very slow reader, he should by now have spelled out the tone poems composed in his praise by "decent sportswriters"—the term is his own—and moved on to matters which he is paid $65,000 a year to handle.

"HAVE YOU HEARD from Happy? Carpenter was asked today. He said he had not. He indicated he didn't expect to.

"I don't know where that story came from," he said, but he did not deny making the remarks attributed to him. He left the impression that he had spoken without realizing he was going to be quoted, but had no intention of ducking responsibility or crying that he had been misquoted.

"I haven't made a formal protest to the commissioner," he said. "If I did, I think he would investigate. But I don't think it is his responsibility. I think it would be up to me to make the complaint and stand by my charges."

That is a tolerant view. Perhaps a naive one, too, because there has been at least one other case exactly like the ones Carpenter mentioned, when a club did beef to Chandler and received no satisfaction whatever. There have been other identical cases, too, mentioned privately by officials of other clubs, in which no charges were filed because no owner enjoys blowing the whistle on another member of his lodge.

NOT EVERYBODY, however, is as tolerant as Carpenter about the commissioner's conduct of his office. By the very fact of his employment and the nature of his job, he is charged with the duty of policing the game and enforcing the rules. Indeed, hardly a day goes by when he does not make a speech declaring:

"I tell the owners, 'You make the rules and I'll enforce 'em. If you don't like the way I do it, I'll get out'."

This is a clear, succinct and accurate statement of his duties, contradicted only by the facts. In such matters as the Carpenter story and the Paul Pettit case, he has not yet shown any inclinaion to enforce the rules. He has shown even less desire to get out.

On the contrary, he was exceedingly busy last December campaigning for a new seven-year contract with a $25,000 salary hike. His current contract then had 30 months to run, so a new agreement would have given him job security for more than nine years to come. The owners called his bluff, voting down his demand for immediate reemployment, then greased him with a $15,000 increase over his former wage of $50,000.

Political science probably can be defined as the art of ingratiating oneself with the right people. Chances are it is natural that a politician should be reluctant to offend his bosses. Nevertheless, the baseball commissioner holds at least a quasi-public trust. If he has any value at all—the point has been debatable one since the spring of 1945—it is as guardian of the public faith in the game.

Nats Sign Pavone, GW High Pitcher

The Nats yesterday announced the signing of Thomas Pavone, 18, a left-handed pitcher with three no-hit games to his credit.

Pavone, 5-foot 11-inch 180-pounder, received a bonus for signing. The Nats outbid three other clubs who were trying for his services.

Pavone, who played for three years at George Washington High of Alexandria, also hurled three years of American Legion ball and one season as a semipro. He will report to Emporia, Va., on March 27 to play with that club in the Class D Virginia State League.

Signs With Redskins

The Redskins yesterday received a signed contract from Gene Pepper, 230-pound University of Missouri guard. Pepper, who stands 6 feet, 2½ inches, was Washington's sixth choice in the player draft.

Man Injured As Rope Burns, Lets Him Fall

A Philadelphia man, replacing cracked bricks in an incinerator shaft at the Dorchester House, 2480 16th st. nw., was critically injured in a four-story fall yesterday when a rope supporting him was burned through, apparently by sparks, or ashes.

The injured man is Norman Manton, 42, an employe of the Chemical Fireproofing Corp., of Washington. He was taken to Emergency Hospital with severe head injuries.

Police said Manton was working at the third floor level of the shaft. He was seated in a rope chair attached to a pulley, which in turn was supported by an inch-thick rope.

Sparks or hot ashes, police theorized, severed the rope. Manton's fall was discovered by an assistant, James Fort of Landover, Md., who noticed the severed rope.

Police said there had been no fire in the incinerator since Sunday. All openings into the shaft were closed off except at the third floor.

Manton, who lived at the Central YMCA while on the job here, had worked on the shaft three days last week to fireproof it.

The Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board said it would investigate the mishap.

Self-Service Gasoline Issue To Be Aired

District Commissioners yesterday decided to hold a public hearing on the question of whether money-saving self-service gasoline stations should be allowed in the District. No date was set.

Banning of the pump-your-own-gas stations as dangerous has been urged by the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

The District division of the American Automobile Association favors permitting the operation of such stations where supervisory personnel are present to prevent drunks and incompetents from using the pumps. It opposes coin-operated pumps which would require the presence only of a change-maker.

The Commissioners' regulations committee yesterday recommended amending police regulations to permit operation of self-service stations along lines approved by the AAA.

The proposed amendment, written by Fire Marshal R. C. Roberts, would prohibit use of coin-operated pumps. It would also prohibit use of automatic devices such as those which allow attendants to clean the windshield while gas is flowing into the tank.

Man Slain In Argument On Dice Game

A 26-year-old Washington man was shot to death early yesterday in a fight that grew out of a dispute over a dice game.

The dead man was George E. Thomas of 920 6th st., ne. He was pronounced dead of a bullet wound in the left side.

Police arrested Willie Littlejohn, 23, of 40 I st. ne. A coroner's inquest held Littlejohn for the grand jury on a charge of homicide.

Witnesses told police the two men were at a party at 222 H st., nw., when they began quarreling over a dice game they had played. Witnesses said Thomas struck Littlejohn in the face, and Littlejohn pulled out the gun and fired.

Littlejohn was arrested while sleeping at the home of a brother at 248 Schott ct. ne.

AF Asks Incinerator To Burn Papers Quickly

The Air Force wants new buildings for its "security service." It is asking Congress for $5,802,900 to pay the bill.

Included in this is $29,000 for an incinerator, "capable of burning 12 tons of classified material within a 24-hour period."

SAID TO BE A SIGN OF SPRING, SEA GULLS PAY THEIR ANNUAL VISIT TO THE MALL. THEY FOLLOW SPAWNING SHAD UP THE POTOMAC

Gulls and Skunks and Cold Bock Beer—Hi De Ho and Spring Is Here!!

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

"The first day of Spring is one thing, and the first Spring day is another. The difference between them is sometimes as great as a month."—Henry Van Dyke.

And who could argue with this poet's shrewd observation? Yesterday was the first day of spring, but Washington had more spring-like weather in January. Remember the record 79 on January 26?

But, as the Poet James Thomson once wrote, "Come, gentle Spring! ethereal Mildness! come."

Spring arrived in a drab carriage. Her gossamer-thin gown was drenched with rain. The clouds frowned on an entrance that should have been sunny and gay.

But the day was mild—a balmy 52 at 4:55 p. m. And what say you for today, Weatherman? More cloudy, more mild, maybe rain, more temperatures in the 50s is the forecast.

Spring's arrival was more discouraging in other sections. Frostburg Md., had 8 inches of snow. Cumberland had 4 inches. The snowplows were out in Garrett and Allegany Counties.

Snow, sleet and rain pelted New York State where 12 inches of snow paralyzed traffic in Sullivan County.

The storms disrupted schedules of at least eight ocean liners. The ships reported they would be one to three days late arriving in New York City.

For most Washingtonians spring will not be spring until the Japanese cherry blossome burst into bloom along the Tidal Basin. It is doubtful that they will be in flower for the annual Cherry Blossom Festival the weekend of March 31.

But there were other harbingers of spring. One man saw a robin. Edward J. Kelly of National Capital Parks saw two flights of wild ducks heading North.

And there were some early buds blooming and the gulls were back.

Funny thing about the sea gulls. They always show up in Washington at this time of year. They cluster in force on the Mall, the Ellipse and the East Potomac Park golf course.

Ed Kelly, the Parks man, thinks they gather there to eat worms and lawn seed.

"Yesterday," said Kelly, "the Tidal Basin was filled with gulls. I've always associated their arrival with the spawning of the winter or hickory shad. The shad—they're something like herring—swim up the river, lay their eggs and die. When the shad float to the surface the gulls feast on them."

Kelly said he believes the gulls come from the lower part of the Potomac River and the Chesapeake Bay and follow the shad upstream.

And another sign of spring: Glen Echo Amusement Park announced yesterday that it will open for its fortieth season on April 8. The swimming pool will open May 25.

It was Thomas Gray who wrote, "Full many a flower is born to blush unseen, and waste its sweetness on the desert air."

This can in no way be applied to the skunk at the University of Maryland who, in the first flower of springtime, promenaded across the campus mall with mincing steps and made quite an impression upon an assorted half a hundred students.

More particularly on half a dozen ROTC students, who executed a military "To the rear march," with more than customary haste, when the little kitty with the stripe appeared.

The skunk was minding his own business in an areaway in the Speech Building, ending up his winter hibernation, probably, or doing something suitable erudite for a campusite.

A group of students looked down into the areaway from a vantage point 10 feet up and spied Mr. Skunk. They obtained two poles and nudged the skunk out of the areaway and into the open, while many shouted, "Stand back, everyone," in the best traditions of skunk routing.

The skunk—he walked as though he wore shoes that pinched—proceeded slowly, leaving a faint, tingling fragrance in the verdant spring air. 'Twas then he encountered the ROTC.

When last seen, he was vanishing over the horizon of Maryland's campus, leaving a few well-mannered hooters behind.

You may not need your oil burner much longer but even so this should be welcome news: Three major distributors, Esso Standard Oil, Shell and L. P. Steuart, announced a drop in the price of No. 2 heating oil—the type usually used in home furnaces—from 11.2 cents to 10.8 cents a gallon.

The winter which has just been eased off the scene will go down as one of the mildest in Washington's history.

January was a "freak" month with record highs being set on seven days of the month. All but one of the high marks were in the 70s. The climax was the mercury reading of 79 on January 26—an all-time record high for the month of January.

Youngsters who got sleds for Christmas had little use for them. Before March 16 there had been only .3 of an inch of snowfall. March 16 produced a snowfall of 2.7 inches but it quickly evaporated.

And spring throws its caress on sports. The opening of the baseball season is just around the corner. The Laurel race track opens Saturday.

Spring brings some relief to Connecticut ave. merchants who have been hindered by construction of the Dupont Circle underpass. The District Highway Department announced yesterday reopening of Connecticut ave. north of Dupont Circle and of Q st. to one-way eastbound traffic.

Repaving of the streets was completed Friday. Now shoppers have immediate access to the 15 stores in the north circle area. They can park their cars on Connecticut ave. north of the circle.

The Highway Department would not predict when streets south of Dupont Circle will be reopened.

Another reminder that spring has come: the placards in restaurants and grocery stores that proclaim, "We have cold bock beer."

Ah, spring. Henry Timrod expressed the proper reverence for spring nearly 100 years ago when he penned these lines:

"Spring, with that nameless pathos in the air
"Which dwells with all things fair,
"Spring, with her golden suns and silver rain,
"Is with us once again."

Divorce Refused; Shakespeare Quoted

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Judge Matthew F. McGuire cited "As You Like It" to explain why he refused yesterday to grant a divorce to an "ungrateful" husband.

Refused a decree was John A. Cocci, 40, a $7600 Navy Department employe, who said that he and his wife, Rose M. Cocci, of Leominster, Mass., had separated "voluntarily" more than five years ago.

Mrs. Cocci denied that she ever wanted a separation and said her husband left her without her consent. She still wants a reconciliation, she testfied.

The judge pointed out that back in the 1930s she helped put her husband through Northeastern University and aided him in his career.

Commenting on this situation, Judge McGuire cited Shakespeare: "As You Like It" Act II, Scene 7, l. 174.

It reads:

"Blow, blow, thou winter wind!
"Thou art no so unkind
"As man's ingratitude."

The judge said that since Mrs. Cocci never agreed to the separation and desires a reconciliation, the separation can't be voluntary and there would be no divorce.

He said:

"In the instant case the wife was unaware for a long time as to her husband's whereabouts and subsequently made an effort through her spiritual adviser to contact him and inform him of her continued desire to return to him. This was admitted by the husband on the stand and is the sole aspect of his testimony in which the court places any credence. The wife, on the other hand, reiterated in her testimony her denial of acquiescence in the separation.

"The husband, however, after permitting the wife to pay for, in the most part, his education so as to better his position in the world, now desires to cast her off like an old garment for a new inamorata.

The judge ordered Cocci to pay his wife $50 a month and counsel fees and costs. She is a clerk in Massachusetts making $34 a week and lives with an aged father who is sporadically employed, the judge said.

Too Long a Wait

Paternity Suit Denied By McGuire

A man who waited seven years before he decided to contest the paternity of his wife's daughter waited too long, Judge Matthew F. McGuire of District Court declared yesterday.

He made the statement in deciding divorce suits based on desertion charges brought by both Mrs. Louise G. Cross of 7 18th st. se., and her estranged husband, James E. Cross, 41, a druggist, of 3214 Brothers pl. se.

The judge gave Mrs. Cross a divorce and $45 a month for the support of her child. Judge McGuire refused Cross's divorce petition and also refused to declare that a child, born during the marriage in 1940, did not belong to Cross.

Cross contended in his 1947 cross-complaint that he was sterile and also said that a relatively new blood test based on the Rh blood factor excluded the possibility that he was the father.

Mrs. Cross denied any misconduct and pointed out that after the child was born, for three years Cross lived with her and the daughter.

Judge McGuire said that he was not satisfied by the evidence before him that the blood tests used were conclusive of paternity.

Judge McGuire, during the course of the trial, took care of Cross's statement that he was sterile. The judge said that Cross could prove that he was presently sterile but not that his condition was the same in 1939.

Stolen '46 Car Made '48, Police Say

They claim he stole a 1946 Chrysler, then altered it skillfully enough with a motor and parts from a wrecked 1948 Chrysler to pass it off as a 1948 model.

So smoothly was the job done, police said, that Richards succeeded in selling the 1946 car to a used car agency as a 1948 auto.

The arrest of Richards, a convicted automobile thief, was the result of a painstaking investigation by Lieut. Jacob Wolf and Detective Sergts. Charles I. Smith and John G. Williams of the auto squad.

On February 8, a 1946 Chrysler sedan belonging to Edward S. Jones of 3410 A st. se., was stolen.

Police later received information that a "hot" car, a 1948 Chrysler, had been sold by the Edwards Motor Co. of 5033 Wisconsin ave. nw., to Lieut. Col. Charles F. Coffey, jr., of 900 Park ave, Falls Church, Va.

The detectives examined Coffey's car. The serial number on the motor checked with the serial number on the body of the car. Then they looked at the secret manufacturer's serial number on the frame of the car. This didn't check. This serial number was the one for the stolen Jones car.

At the Edwards Motor Co. they learned that Richards had sold the car to the company for $1175.

Then they went to Baltimore and checked registration lists of Maryland cars. There they found listed the serial number that was on the motor of the car.

Originally this motor had been in a 1948 Chrysler that was wrecked.

An insurance company sold it as junk to the Federal Auto Parts Co., of 1246 11th st. se. It was Richards, police learned, who bought the wrecked auto for $400.

Richards was arrested Monday night at his home, at 5062 Sherrier pl. nw. He took the detectives to a garage at 818 Rockville pike, Rockville, Md., where the transformation allegedly took place.

Richards told police the car be sold to the Edwards firm was not stolen, but was the wrecked 1948 car he had bought.

Richards, twice convicted in the District for car theft, was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence yesterday. He was held in $3000 bonds and his case was continued until today.

Leukemia Patient Flown Here Treated by New Wonder Drug

The Washington Post

Gerald Funk, 16 months, and his mother, Mrs. Mary Sue Funk

Georgetown University physicians are using cortisone, rare and wonder-working drug, in the hopes of staving off the death of a 16-month-old boy.

Their patient is Gerald Funk, loveable, blond and blue-eyed youngster who was flown in here last week from New Mexico for diagnosis and treatment.

Hospital tests showed, the doctors reported, that he is the victim of leukemia, so-called blood cancer for which there is no known cure.

The doctors don't even hope the new drug will cure "Gerry," they admitted yesterday. Their only hope is that it will hold off death for perhaps six months to a year, perhaps long enough to find the cure.

Without treatment, he might not live more than another three weeks, Mrs. Funk said doctors told her.

The patient was brought here by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Funk, during last Thursday's snowstorm They only suspected then that their boy, "who never before was sick, even for a day," had leukemia.

The Funk boy received his first injection of cortisone on Saturday, the start of a scheduled 10-day treatment course, his doctors said. By the end of that time, they explained, they should know whether or not he will be helped.

His parents and his 5-year-old sister, Joyce, are staying here with his aunt and uncle, Mrs. and Mr. Paul Wilhelm, at 2705 Plyers Mill rd., Silver Spring.

The family lives at Fort Bayard, N. Mex., where the father is an employe of Veterans' Administration.

By Abortion

Peckham Quizzed on Girl's Death

Dr. Henry Peckham, jr., was ordered by Judge Alexander Holtzoff yesterday to answer questions of the District grand jury probing the alleged abortion death of Jean Costello, 21-year-old airline reservation clerk.

When Dr. Peckham, 42, a Southeast Washington physician appeared in District Court during the morning in the presence of the grand jury, it was the first time that disclosure was made that the talesmen were investigating the Costello case.

She died December 12 of septicemia resulting from a "perforated pregnant uterus," according to authorities. The operation, the court was told, had been performed five days before.

Dr. Peckham, who twice has been acquitted of performing illegal operations here, had no comment to make on the case.

However, his lawyer, Dorsey K. Offutt said, "If there was an abortion performed, Dr. Peckham had absolutely nothing to do with it."

Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly told the court the following:

Dr. Peckham attended the Costello woman on December 8 for perhaps 20 to 25 minutes. Later he called in a "Dr. Fischer" who was later identified as Dr. Andrew E. Fischer, to examine Miss Costello.

When Dr. Fischer arrived, police were present at her 1747 F st. nw. apartment, having been summoned there by her family. Dr. Fischer examined her and she was transferred to a hospital. The next day she was flown to Boston in an attempt to save her life with artificial kidneys not available here.

Fihelly said that Dr. Fischer was very cooperative with investigators. Fihelly said that Dr. Peckham declined to answer questions on four points.

They were what treatment was given by him to Miss Costello, what records he kept on the case, what he told Dr. Fischer and what Dr. Fischer told him.

Dr. Peckham told the court he believed that under the law, he was not permitted to disclose confidential information that pertained to his patients.

Mental Lapses Cited By Dodson at Trial

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

The horrors of war and resultant mental lapses were offered to an Arlington Circuit Court jury yesterday by Francis E. Dodson as his defense to charges of intent to rape and rob.

In nearly an hour and a half on the witness stand, the suspended county policeman maintained under direct and cross examination he remembers nothing of the ordeal to which he is alleged to have subjected Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bartels in their home last September 29.

On Monday, Mrs. Bartels told the jury of a "hideous ordeal" in which Dodson forced her husband into a bedroom closet at gunpoint and then made improper advances toward her.

"I Don't Recall"

To questions of both prosecution and defense attorneys about details of the incident he replied:

"I don't recall."

The case, under way since Monday morning, is expected to go to the 12-man jury today. Maximum penalty in the event of conviction on the intent to rape charge is death.

Dodson, 31, began his testimony by relating his experiences as an Air Corps crash crewman in England, where he often had to "pick up dead men and pieces of human bodies" from crashed planes.

Under prompting by Defense Attorney John Paul Jones, he told of a bomb explosion which "blew me out of my GI shoes and hurled me 35 to 50 feet in the air."

Frequent Headaches

Since the blast, he testified, he has suffered frequent violent headaches and occasional lapses of memory. He told of one occasion when he woke up in a jail and learned he had fought with a sheriff the night before.

He insisted he never remembered being in the Bartels home and said he did not recall having seen either Bartels or his wife until they appeared in court yesterday.

His memory faded "around 11 p. m." September 28, about an hour and a half before he is accused of entering the Bartels home, he testified. Earlier, after getting off duty at 4 p. m. he had participated in a drinking party with several other policemen and had taken "three or four" drinks, he said.

A barrage of questions by Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker concerning events described by the Bartels brought only the unchanging answer, "I don't recall."

Psychiatrists Testify

After Dodson's testimony, two psychiatrists engaged by the defense took the witness stand and said they believed Dodson was temporarily insane the night he entered the Bartels home. They were Dr. Frank S. Caprio, a private psychiatrist formerly associated with the Veterans' Administration, and Dr. Francis R. Riesenman, a member of the staff of St. Elizabeths Hospital here.

They said Dodson's "psychotic condition" was an outgrowth of his war ordeals, possibly stemming from the bomb explosion.

The defense also placed several character witnesses on the stand. They included two of Dodson's former superiors, Police Chief Harry L. Woodyard and retired Police Capt. Ernest Miller.

After testifying favorably as to Dodson's reputation for integrity, truth, sobriety and morality, Chief Woodyard was asked by Jones if he thought Dodson would be returned to the police force if acquitted.

"I don't see how he could ever hope for that," the police chief replied.

Carnal Knowledge Conviction Set Aside; Man Served 2 Years

Judge Richmond B. Keech yesterday set aside the carnal knowledge conviction of James A. Matthews, 39, for which he has served more than two years of a 10-to-30-year sentence.

The District Court jurist awarded a new trial after hearing that the Matthews trial in October, 1947, was replete with "subtle machinations, fraud, perjury and subornation of perjury."

Tied in with the carnal knowledge case is the 1947 larceny of $18,000 from the First National Bank of Alexandria. Matthews' estranged wife, Eulalia, 52, a spiritualist here, is now serving 4½ years in prison for the larceny. She is known as Madame Yvonne.

Matthews charged that it was his wife who "framed" him.

Matthews has steadfastly maintained that he is innocent. He was a teacher in a Negro business school here at the time he was charged.

He said that on the day of the bank theft, he drove his wife home from Alexandria and thereafter learned that she had arranged the theft. Matthews told the court that he vainly tried to get his wife to return the money.

Within a few days, he said, she brought around a young girl and said that people of the neighborhood were accusing him of beating the child. She told him that if he left the city until the matter blew over, she would use her influence to see that no charges were brought.

Matthews then went to Detroit, Mich., from which he was extradited when he was indicated for having sexual relations with a 14-year-old child. The girl testified that he had impregnated her and that she was expecting a child.

While in Lorton Reformatory following his conviction, Matthews filed a motion for a new trial. Officials there asked Attorneys Louis L. Whitestone and Eugene R. Gilmartin to investigate.

Last December, the girl admitted that she lied when she said she had been pregnant, the court was told. She was influenced by Mrs. Matthews to so testify at the trial, Whitestone and Gilmartin charged. The reason was that Mrs. Matthews wanted her husband "put away" so he could not testify against her, they said. She was willing to pay $1000 to put him in the electric chair, Matthews said.

After Judge Keech set the conviction aside without objection from the Government, Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz said he would decide Thursday whether the Government would retry the case or whether the indictment would be dismissed.

Red Cross Reaches 59 Pct. Of Goal Here, Meeting Told

The American Red Cross campaign in the Metropolitan Washington area has "rounded the corner," it was reported yesterday, with gifts now totaling 59.65 percent of $1,039,000 goal.

Daniel W. Bell, general campaign chairman, told a "General Business Day" report meeting that gifts contributed total $619,809.25. The meeting was held at the U. S. Chamber of Commerce Hall of Flags.

The Rt. Rev. John K. Cartwright, rector of St. Matthew's Cathedral, was yesterday's keynote speaker. He predicted a successful drive "not because the people are lucky but because there are people willing to work for the Red Cross."

Two more Federal Government departments joined the over-the-top group yesterday—the State Department and the Air Force.

Next report meeting will be "City and County Day" at 12:30 p. m. Friday in the Chamber's Hall of Flags. Budget Director Frank Pace, jr., will speak.

Agreement Ends 4-Week Strike By Engineers in Six Theaters

The strike of 26 stationary engineers who man the heating plants of six Washington theaters ended yesterday after exactly four weeks with a two-year agreement which increased wages and established uniform scales for each type of job.

The strike was settled after three meetings here and in New York in which Federal Mediator Richard Goodrick used his good offices to bring the parties together.

The agreement, retroactive to September 15, 1949, raised wages by more than 20 cents an hour in some cases, and increased the take-home pay "up to $27 a week," according to Jesse N. West, business agent of Local 99, International Union of Operating Engineers (AFL), which represents the heating engineers. Time and a half after 48 hours also was provided.

Picketing of the theaters involved, the Warner, Metropolitan, Tivoli, Capitol, Palace and Trans-Lux, was stopped at 4 p. m., yesterday.

Police Inspectorship May Go to Fondahl

Capt. John Fondahl is in line for a police inspectorship that will be vacant April 1 when Inspector Clarence Talley retires, it was learned yesterday.

Fondahl, recently designated as police department laison man to the new civilian defense setup being organized for the District, is the senior captain on the force.

Sergt. Greenfield Pvt. Eubank

If the seniority is not disregarded—and it usually is not—Fondahl will get the job.

Other Promotions Due

The men who topped the list in the examination for the new police promotion list will also move up a grade.

Lieut. Albert B. Clark heads the lieutenants on the new list so he will go to captain. He is at present acting captain of the Second Precinct.

Sergt. Lewis Peters, administrative assistant to Police Superintendent Robert J. Barret, heads the list, so he will be promoted to lieutenant.

Corpl. Boyd T. Willard, attached to the police school, will move up to sergeant.

Private Boost Undetermined

The question of who will be promoted from private to corporal has not been determined because the Civil Service Commission has not yet certified the new promotion list of privates.

More than half of the members of the police force took the examination last October 22 on which the new promotion lists are based.

They received their marks and place on the lists early in January. However, they have the right to appeal the gradings.

A CSC spokesman said the new promotion lists from corporal to and including lieutenant will be tendent Robert J. Barrett, heads forwarded to the Police Depart-

He said the CSC will not be able to certify the promotion list of privates at this time, however, because so many of them are appealing the marks they received and the CSC has not had time to review all the appeals.

District Commissioners yesterday retired two veteran policemen because of physicial disability and approved the appointment of 13 rookies to the force.

Retired were:

Detective Sergt. William R. Greenfield, 53, who received 25 commendations during nearly 28 years of service. The Board of Police and Fire Surgeons found him suffering from a duodenal ulcer and back trouble.

Pvt. Raymond L. Eubank, 48, Eleventh Precinct patrolman with 25¼ years service. He has arthritis. Both were retired on half pay as of April 1.

Montgomery Police Ask Pay Raises

A delegation from the County Police Association yesterday conferred with County Personnel Director Ben H. Hall, requesting a higher pay scale in the county's 1950-51 budget.

District policemen average $400 or more above the county police in comparable grades.

Detective Sergeant James M. Anderson, association president, termed the present Montgomery scale "inadequate" for policemen with families. Many of the officers are holding other part-time jobs, he said, to augment their pay from the county.

Hall said the personnel board already has begun a study of police salaries in surrounding areas with a view to recommending increases in Montgomery County.

Patrolmen $2600-$3300 ($3077-$3754); corporals, $3400-$3500 ($4025); sergeants, $3600-$3800 ($4228); detective-sergeants, $3800-$3900 ($4296-$4567); lieutenants, $3900-$4100 ($4634); captains, $4200-$4400 ($5379), and inspectors, $4500-$4700 ($6598).

Anacostia Unit Plans to Bar Red Groups

Communists and members of "subversive groups" would be barred from membership in the Anacostia Citizens Association, according to a constitutional amendment proposed at its meeting last night.

The resolution, which will be acted upon next week, also would drop from membership any persons joining such subversive groups after becoming active in the association.

The assocation, meeting at the YMCA, 17th st. and Goodhope rd. se., went on record in favor of a 40-hour week for District policemen, provided such a move would not increase taxes but would increase efficiency of the force.

Central Northwest

The Central Northwest Civic Association last night commended the Board of Education for its recent order transferring Central High School to Negro students.

The association met in the Garnet-Patterson Junior High School and voted to indorse the Johnston teacher sick leave bill. It also asked that policemen be put on a five-day, 40-hour work week.

The group heard talks on health by William H. Cary, jr., director of the Bureau of Public Health Engineering, and Mrs. M. L. Gates of the D. C. Tuberculosis Association. The meeting was held in the Garnet-Patterson Junior High School.

Petworth Citizens

Repeal of the personal property tax was asked last night by the Petworth Citizens Association in a meeting at the Petworth Library.

The association indorsed the 5-day, 40-hour week for policemen. Two other resolutions opposed any change in the name of Roosevelt High School, and opposed the proposed extension of the hours during which the sale of liquor is permitted.

Mrs. Gannon Quits Post in Phone Union

Mrs. Mary Gannon, leader of organized Washington area telephone workers for the past 15 years, last night announced her resignation as president of Division 50, Communications Workers of America (CIO), to devote more time to her 2-year-old son, Tommy.

Mrs. Gannon

Mrs. Gannon, 38, said, however, she may later decide to seek a seat in the Virginia General Assembly or in the House of Representatives. She has also resigned from her job with the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

On a leave of absence since November for her first vacation in several years, Mrs. Gannon said she had deeply appreciated her career as a telephone operator and as a union organizer, but feels a deeper obligation to her young son.

Tommy was born in May, 1947, just as Mrs. Gannon and her union ended a long strike against the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. The Gannons live at 1627 N. Abingdon st., Arlington.

Mrs. Gannon began her union career in the mid thirties as an organizer, later became president of a union of Virginia telephone operators. She recalls leading her union through about 20 strikes and work stoppages.

Housebreaking Charge Holds Man, Friend

A 21-year-old suspect was arrested yesterday in connection with two housebreakings while he was being questioned in connection with two holdups.

He is Clarence Cooper, 69 O st. nw. He and his "girl friend," Clarabelle F. Wright, 21, 100 Virginia ave. sw., were held in $4000 bond and their arraignment was continued until March 29.

Police said Cooper admitted breaking into a Connecticut ave. dress shop on January 27 and removing $2000 worth of clothes, and breaking into an apartment at 4912 Ames st. ne., on February 22, and taking $230 worth of clothing and a .32-caliber automatic.

Miss Wright was arrested, police said, after Cooper said his girl friend had some of the clothes and some were found at her home.

Miss Wright also was booked for assault with a deadly weapon. Police said she assaulted Ninth Precinct Lieut. Richard Cox while being questioned.

Cooper and another man were arrested by Pvt. Paul V. Minnick, while the latter was returning home from work at 4 p. m. Minnick said Cooper looked like the suspect wanted for holding up two High Ice Cream stores two weeks ago.

Both men denied the High holdup, but Cooper later admitted the housebreakings, police said. The other man was released after questioning.

Cooperative Buying Study Urged in Md.

The Maryland League of Municipalities last night was urged to study a plan for cooperative buying and sharing of equipment and supplies by townships in Prince Georges County.

Herbert Wells, College Park councilman, made the suggestion after Dr. Joseph M. Ray, head of the University of Maryland's department of government and politics, told the league that cooperative buying programs are used in 42 of the 48 States.

Wells emphasized the need for economy in use of heavy road construction equipment by Prince Georges townships, which under their present government must contract individually for projects.

Frank Summers, representing General Services Administration, advised representatives of 15 municipalities that the Federal Government will advance funds for community planning purposes without interest, to be repaid when projects are completed.

Dr. Elwyn A. Mauck, director of the State Fiscal Research Bureau, outlined tax problems that may be expected in the various townships.

John P. Mannion, director of the State Retirement System, explained conditions under which towns and municipalities may qualify for retirement benefits.

Doctor Wins Child-Slapping Damage Suit

A Municipal Court jury yesterday agreed that a physician may use a reasonable amount of force in treatment for the patient's own good.

The jury, in so finding, dismissed a damages suit against Dr. William H. Spicer, 522 7th st. sw., who admitted "nudging" the check of a 4-year-old patient who had twisted away when the doctor attempted to apply adhesive tape to a face cut.

The child's mother, Mrs. Grover Davis, 1529 Good Hope rd. se., in asking a $15,000 judgment against the doctor testified that the physician had slapped her daughter, Carol, "two or three times." She said that as a result the child is now afraid of medical attention.

The trial, before Judge Milton S. Kronheim, jr., was delayed during the afternoon session when a defense witness, Miss Anne Johnson, 1035 Perry st. ne., fainted on the witness stand. The courtroom was cleared as Dr. Spicer administered first aid. Miss Johnson was then excused.

The suit was instituted in August, 1946, in District Court but was certified to the Municipal Court after pretrial proceedings.

No Strangers, the Tedders Have Welcoming Committee

By Ellen Buell Parry

AIR MARSHAL Lord and Lady Arthur William Tedder will be no strangers in a strange land when, early in April, they come to Washington to live.

Air Marshall Tedder, in a surprise appointment revealed this week, will take over as chief of the British Joint Services Mission instead of General Sir Neil Ritchie, previously announced successor to retiring General Sir William Morgan. General Ritchie will, however, come to Washington as chief of the British Military Staff, a position last held by Field Marshal Lord Henry Maitland-Wilson.

The Tedders visited this country together in 1945 and again in 1949, and have many close friends in Washington, among them Air Chief of Staff and Mrs. Hoyt Vandenburg, Gen. and Mrs. Carl A. Spaatz, and the Joseph Davies.

Lord Tedder married the present Lady Tedder in 1943. The former Mrs. Marie de Seton Black, daughter of Sir Bruce Seton, she is tall, slim and auburn-haired. In 1941, she made a 6-week tour of the United States to tell the story of Britain's ambulance girls. She herself had several narrow escapes in burning London streets during the blitzes, as a member of the London Auxiliary Ambulance Service. Later she served in North Africa, organizing the Malcolm Clubs which provide front-line amenities for fighting men.

Air Marshal Tedder was born in Stirlingshire, Scotland, in 1890. He is quiet, modest, has twinkling blue eyes, slightly protruding ears, and a pipe forever in his mouth. He has devoted his life to aviation since 1916.

Ironically, the air he served so well robbed him of a wife and son, the first Lady Tedder having been the victim of an air crash near Cairo, and his oldest son, Arthur, killed in combat over England.

Although dedicated wholeheartedly to flying, Lord Tedder has several hobbies, the chief of them, sketching in color. Cricket and Shakespeare are his other avocations.

During the war, he was Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's Deputy Supreme Commander of the Western Invasion Armies, the first air man ever to hold such an important overall position. "Ike" and the Air Marshal became close personal friends. General Eisenhower attended the wedding of the Tedders and served as godfather at the christening of their young son, Richard, now four. When Tedder was in Washington in 1945, Eisenhower gave a large dinner for him at the Statler.

Since the war the Air Marshal has served as Chief of the British Royal Air Force. In Washington, in addition to being head of the British Mission, he will represent Britain on the Atlantic Treaty Organization.

It's Spring and New Year's Both at Iran Embassy

By Marie McNair

THE FIRST DAY OF SPRING is New Year's Day in Iran, and the Ancient Festival of Norouz has been celebrated by Persians for many hundreds of years.

Yesterday at the Iranian Embassy's Norouz party there were seven symbols of the new season gathered together on a small table in the drawing room. All beginning with the Arabic letter "s," there were the white hyacinth for purity, a single red apple, four brightly hued eggs and a potted herb with its young tendrils bursting from the earth. A gold fish swam in a glass bowl. Samples of Eastern sweets were piled on tiny plates and for good luck and bounty, a gilt-framed mirror doubled the setting.

For the Iranian Ambassador, Hussein Ala, who's been here since the war's end, it was his last New Year's party. He's to leave the end of April to take over Foreign Minister duties in Teheran.

Buffets Serve Toothsome Dishes

MME. ALA, who's been absent most of the winter, is at present in Bryn Mawr where her daughter, Iran is a student. Yesterday her mother, Mme. Naserelmolk, was hostess, wearing a gown of turquoise blue and silver brocade.

There were two buffets set up across the hall, one in the library, the other in the dining room. A whole lamb was carved in generous slices and there were other tempting dishes as seafood Newburgh, cold turkeys and hams, fluffy rice covered with green sauce rich in herb seasoning. Platters of delicate pastries included the special New Year cookie called a "window" which looks more like a giant snowflake and is just as light.

The Netherlands Ambassador, Eelco van Kleffens, and Mme. van Kleffens with a halo of spring blossoms for a hat, found Gen. and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley agreeable tea-time companions. The Syrian Minister and Mme. El-Khouri, heard for the first time the story of the Persian New Year, and it was new too, to Mrs. McCeney Werlich.

Others there yesterday were Representative and Mrs. Dewey Short, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Senator Theodore Francis Green and the Saudi Arabian Ambassador, Sheikh Asad Al-Faqih. Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Whittemore were going on to the Argentine Embassy, as was Mrs. Jess Bryan Bennett.

Dinner Honors Prince Christian

PRINCE AND PRINCESS CHRISTIAN of Hesse were the guests in whose honor Mrs. Alexander Legare entertained at dinner last evening at her home in Georgetown.

At Georgetown's Savile Bookshop yesterday afternoon, Donald Downs, who owns the shop, gave an autograph party for Bradley Nash, who coauthored (with Cornelius Linde). "A Hook in Leviathan" which made its first appearance yesterday.

Vice Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral John Dale Price, who's been assigned as Chief of Naval Training at Penscaola, Fla., will go to Arkansas for a month's visit with his family when he leaves town April 3. Mrs. Price will go to see her family in California and they'll meet in Pensacola a month hence. Son John is to remain here at Montgomery College until school's over.

Yesterday Vice Admiral and Mrs. John H. Cassady gave a farewell cocktail party for the Prices.

Argentina's Treasury Minister Honored

ARGENTINA'S Minister of the Treasury Ramon Cereijo, who's also president of the National Economic Council of Argentina, shared honors with Senora de Cereijo at a reception last evening given by the Argentine Ambassador, Jeronimo Remorino, at the embassy. Dr. Cereijo is here to attend the special meeting of the Inter-American Economic and Social Council being held at the Pan American Union.

White and blue flowers and iced cakes on the buffet carried out the national colors of the Argentine. Senora de Cereijo, who welcomed guests with the Ambassador and her husband, wore a fuchsia taffeta frock with bois de rose dots and a spray of purple orchids.

Latin American Ambassadors and their wives were there, as well as envoys to the Organization of American States.

Among others who attended this pleasant party were the Assistant Secretary for Inter-American Affairs, Edward G. Miller, jr., and Mrs. Miller; Deputy Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Willard Barber, Mr. and Mrs. Howard H. Tewksbury, Mr. and Mrs. Rollin S. Atwood and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dearborn.

Then there were Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Muir, Undersecretary of Labor and Mrs. Michael J. Galven, Robert L. Garner of the International Bank, and his mother, Mrs. Robert Garner; Herbert E. Gaston, president of the Export-Import Bank, and Mrs. Gaston; Mr. and Mrs. Hawthorne Arey, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Saur, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Whittemore and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Sherwood. The embassy's French chef had prepared a variety of supper dishes including consomme, a risotto of chicken and rice; flaky pastry canapes, cold hams, turkeys and a molded salmon.

Sidney and his orchestra played throughout the evening.

Miss Low Gives Tea at Lounge

MISS RHODA LOW entertained at tea in the Mayflower Lounge yesterday afternoon. Her guests were Mrs. Julius Wadsworth, Miss Madeline Austin and Miss Cornelia Bowie.

Also enjoying the tea hour in the Lounge were Mrs. Consuelo Seone, Mrs. Clauda Mickelwait and Mrs. Allan Cunningham. Colonel and Mrs. Seone will leave soon for Europe and will visit many of the places in Germany which Mrs. Mickelwait also visited when she and her husband, Colonel Mickelwait were stationed there last year.

Married a Third Time, Woman Is Harried By Husband's Jealous Antipathy to Her 10-Year-Old Daughter by Previous Union

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Four years ago I was forced to divorce my second husband after 12 years' marriage, which left me at 36 the sole support of myself and a 6-year-old daughter.

After a year of grief and illness I met John, almost 15 years my junior, and when his friendship began to resemble love, I told him we couldn't marry because of the age difference. Also I was wary of his disposition as a stepfather, for he had said he never wanted children of his own. But because he was always pleasant to Ann Marie, I finally married him, after warning that it was a case of "Love me, love my child."

Since our marriage, his attitude towards her is either hostile or completely indifferent. Towards me he is tender, affectionate and co-operative. He hands me three-fourths of his pay check every week and never questions my ability to manage the household; but in spite of our harmonious relations, he has been declaring over and over that he is going to leave me because of Ann Marie. This puts me in a horrible position.

Reared in Large Family

I DON'T KNOW whether he is selfish, childish, jealous or psychopathic. He was the eighth child in a family of nine children, and when his father yelled, they jumped, he says. His childhood wasn't very happy, but is that cause for him to want to make others unhappy now? He won't accompany me anywhere with Ann, excludes himself from recreations I suggest, and refuses to speak when she and I return from little outings. He seems to want to boss her, countermands my directions, and sulks for hours if I defend her.

She and I try to remember never to demonstrate affection in his presence, for if we do, immediately he speaks sharply to her, and his severe unsympathetic attitudes paralyze her with fright. Then he calls her dumb and hardheaded as she stands trembling and frightened. She is a good child, an excellent student, never causes me any trouble and neighbors remark on her sweet disposition, but John never gives her a word of praise or credit.

My daughter's confused rejected feelings might easily be the means of ruining her life eventually, whereas if I sacrifice the marriage for her sake, it means one more failure for me. Please advise me—am I a fool to try to stick on in the situation? R. E.

Rage From Childhood

DEAR R. E.: Obviously John's dislike of children means that he lives, moves and has his being in a neurotic cloud of undissolved rage, carried over from epic wretchedness in early years, when seven siblings were big enough to walk over him in a scramble for mom's attention, and the tiniest rival undermined him just by virtue of being the baby. A tough situation for a little boy; but it is ridiculous of John nowadays to continue acting in terms of how he felt then.

You are quite right—John's reactions to Ann Marie are selfish, childish and jealous. He isn't being adult in the least in relation to her. In proximity to your kind mothering of her, all his unconscious rancors connected with his childhood frustrations begin to smart, and quite involuntarily he acts hateful, without knowing why he does so. He was attracted to you, a much older woman, chiefly because of your maternal aura, no doubt, which appealed to his desperately unsatisfied lifelong hunger for exclusively devoted mother-love.

Shows Immature Personality

The difference between mature character and immature personality is that the first is able to deal directly and suitably with present experience, because thoughtfully aware of what is going on in his immediate relationships, as distinct from what happened to him in past personal history. The immature personality lacks that competence and clarity.

His emotions make no distinction between bygone business and today's potentials. Like John, he stays perennially in a fog of defensive, dependent feelings appropriate to helpless, anxious childhood—thus he acts in terms of these feelings, not in a sensibly adult way.

So much for your husband's quandary, which makes a problem for you and Ann. If he is interested only in banishing her, not in overcoming his maladjustment to normal family life, then the situation isn't very promising. But my advice is to take the long view and get the benefits of firsthand psychological help for both of you. Given insight into what ails him, and pointers in the practice of mature male conduct, he might become a Grade-A stepfather. M. H.

Confessions of a Famous Father

Bounding Main Abounds in Fish and Big Memories

By John Mason Brown

(Editor's Note: Mr. Brown turns his critical eye away from the world with its woes to observe with reportorial zeal his two small sons and their playmates. This is the third of six chapters condensed from John Mason Brown's latest book, "Morning Faces," published by Whittlesey House.)

Installment Three

THREE MEN AND A BOAT

A CAT would have been hard put to determine which of us smelled the fishier—my two sons and I, or the catch we had just laid out on the pier.

Our haul included ten smallish scup, three little chuck which my 6-year-old rightly insisted had been "tooken with rigor mortis," and one gaping, if infinitesimal, bluefish. We had not lifted it from the Cassie B. without a considerable show of pride.

"Good-by, Cap'n," said I, "and thanks a lot. I can't tell you how often this winter we'll think back to you and these days up here."

From past experience I knew this to be true, gospel true. We would think back to Martha's Vineyard and our fishing expeditions there again and again. At meals without number. In conversations beyond counting.

"Yep," smiled the captain, "no doubt 'bout it. Pretty good fishin' up here."

The boys beamed. Such is the special vanity of anglers that, though I had seen the captain's wink and heard it in his voice, I felt happy myself inside.

Sons Acknowledged Their First Love

I NOTICED the boys were looking past the captain across the short stretch of hot sand to the water's edge and at the Cassie B.

Both my sons had given her their hearts. She was the first boat to win their love. They loved her fiercely, with that warmth which men can come to feel for boats. In their eyes she was different, special, set apart.

Even I had begun to have a ridiculous affection for her, mistaking for her personality what was no more than the good times she had given us.

To the captain she was merely one of his rowboats, gayer than some (inasmuch as she was painted white on the outside and ice-cream-cone tan on the inside), but still a nameless thing.

To us she was adventure. For my sons—this summer at any rate — she combined the more romantic features of the Santa Maria, the Hispaniola, the Pequod, the Beagle and the Arcturus.

End of Summer Always Melancholy

TAKING leave of the Cassie B. was not easy. For them or me. It was the final proof of the summer's ending. This we found as melancholy as (when once we were back in New York) we would find the onrush of winter exciting.

The 10-year-old took his farewell simply by looking at the Cassie B., his lips drawn down at the corner. Then he turned back to the fish on the pier. The younger boy, less embarrassed by age, dared to reach for words.

"Good-by, Cassie B.," said he to the unanswering rowboat and the captain's utter surprise. "Have a nice winter and be a good boat."

My sons and I are the most incomplete of anglers. We cannot pretend to speak the language of Sir Isaak. But his talk is music in our ears.

My boys came to fishing early; I late. They feel for it the natural enthusiasm of youth. I approach it with a convert's zeal.

For years I had not the patience for it. To me it was the most unendurable of timewasters. I liked my fish on the table, not on the hook.

Now, however, I can sit in a boat for hours, unaware of the passage of time. What used to make me nervous now quiets my nerves. What I once held to be dull, I now know to be exciting.

The boys have tasted the delights (could a Roman emperor have known greater?) of making triumphal entries at noon down the crowded main street of Vineyard Haven.

They have come marching home burdened with what some have been mean enough to refer to as a "mess" of fish. Upon reaching the inn with their haul, theirs has been the genuine male pleasure of having female admirers look, or pretend to look, away in horror from what they as men have not shrunk from facing.

Wise Mother Declines Tactfully

WE HAVE also sustained the grief of having the fastidious lady after whom the Cassie B. was named refuse to board her. Summer after summer, and day after day, we have begged her, pleaded with her, to come with us.

Although she has been too kind to say no, she has never yet said yes. She has given us to understand, however, that women just aren't up to the terrible rigors of fishing.

By this strategy she has massaged the egos of her sons and spared her shoes, her stockings, her summer dresses, her complexion, her nostrils and her patience. Secretly we have been pleased, though deprived.

As American men, we have been surprised and grateful to be allowed the illusion of a world, however small, that was entirely male.

The harbor through which we have rowed to the breakwater and back has been crowded with tempting motorboats, with graceful sailboats, with fishing vessels large and small and yachts of all sorts and sizes. These have meant that my sons have been free to compare our ways of fishing with those of other people.

We were unaware of them during the first blissful fishing summer. We were only mildly conscious of them last summer. But this year, I cannot lie, mutinous mutterings were heard aboard the Cassie B.

I know, because I joined in this chorus myself.

"Gee, if we could only have a motorboat!"

I do not blame the other boats for these complaints. Pleasures cannot stand still. To remain pleasant they, too, must be progressive.

AFTER all, there was Plato's cave. In it, I have consoled myself by remembering, three people had sat with their backs to the entrance. Then someone walked past the cave's opening. His shadow was cast on the wall in front of the three men. They realized that beyond the world in which they lived there was another. For the first time they were unhappy.

They had outgrown their cave, even as this summer we, as fishermen, began to outgrow the Cassie B. Like us, however, they had known their happiness. No shadow on the wall, no enlarging world, could take this away from them.

Needs of Mentally Ill Children Revealed

By Norma Lanum

A 7-YEAR-OLD Washington boy who has tried repeatedly to commit suicide poses a problem at Children's Hospital Department of Psychiatry.

He should be kept under close medical observation but there are no "in-patient" facilities for psychotic children in Washington.

This case was revealed yesterday by Dr. Reginald S. Lourie, director of the Psychiatry Department, during a round table discussion of "The Mental Hygiene Picture in Washington," at Junior League headquarters.

Dr. Lourie used the case of the 7-year-old as a dramatic illustration of the lack of provisions in Washington for in-patient treatment of the city's mentally ill children. "In-patients" lodge and board at the hospital while receiving treatment.

Building Doesn't Help

DR. LOURIE also stated that the new building for Children's Hospital, construction of which is slated to begin next month, fails to provide extra facilities to fill these needs of the young mentally-ill.

Other participants on the five-member panel acknowledged the drastic need for more facilities for caring for these children, but at the same time pointed out that Washington is an outstanding pioneer in other fields of mental hygiene.

Miss Marjorie M. Levy, a public health nurse of wide experience in the District, spoke of the advanced therapy theories used in the Child Guidance Clinic, 3246 P st. nw.

Rock climbing with ropes is one new form of therapy being put to use there. Miss Levy takes groups of pre-adolescent children who suffer from some type of mental adjustment to Rock Creek Park where they form rock scaling teams.

Prepares for Living

SCALING steep rocks is one of the most "ego-strengthening" forms of therapy for children, Miss Levy said. And at the same time it serves as "rehearsals for adult living."

Each child of a rope climbing team has a great responsibility for the safely to the others. And each climber must have strong faith in the teammate who holds the rope at the bottom of the cliff.

Miss Levy also described a seminar in progress now for teachers of Western High School and Gordon Junior High School, with representatives from the Bureau of Mental Hygiene. She is moderator for the current series of six weekly programs, in which specific cases of student behavior problems are aired so that their origins may be determined.

The panel also included Dr. Leopold E. Wexberg, director of the Alcoholic Rehabilitation program of the D. C. Health Department and acting director of the Bureau of Mental Hygiene.

Dr. Wexberg announced his plans to install woodworking machinery and buy musical instruments for a broader occupational therapy program at the Alcoholic Clinic, 2227 M st. nw.

Also, he hopes to expand the social program of the clinic with the help of Alcoholics Anonymous. More parties without alcohol will help solve the loneliness problem of the alcoholic according to the speaker.

Parlez-vous? If Not, All You Need Do Is Rent Records From District Library. Il n'y a pas de Quoi, Mme.

DEAR ANNE:
Is it possible to rent foreign language records? R.L.M., Arlington, Va.

The Washington Public Library plans to have foreign language lesson records for rent beginning about the middle of April. These will have accompanying textbooks and will come in four different languages. Check with the Literature Division of the library about April 15 to find just when they will be available.

Meanwhile, the library has such records that you can listen to at several of its branches—Petworth, Mount Pleasant, Southeast, Georgetown, and Chevy Chase. You sign up to use these records in a special room an hour or so at a time.

Another thing: There's a firm here that will repurchase foreign language records from you a year after you've bought them from this company. They pay 40 percent of the original price, have the largest collection of language lesson records in the United States. The telephone number, Republic 7972.

TO C.Y.S.: Here's a bit of information about finding matching materials. Another reader writes that a Pennsylvania avenue firm specializes in this, carrying thousands of samples so that they can order matching clothes fabrics for you. The telephone number: Republic 0618.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you tell me if silverfish eat other fabrics besides cotton? Also are they infectious? Mrs. E. G., Washington.

Rayon provides a particularly tasty morsel for silverfish, though they enjoy practically any fabric with starch or sizing in it. They're not infectious, just destructive.

DEAR ANNE:
I should like to hear from other readers who have had experience in washing quilted bedspreads made of permanent glaze chintz. The store recommends dry cleaning but says they have been washed successfully, but I'd like some first-hand account. The question is whether they will mat, as the materials are color fast. Mrs. N. D., Washington.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you give me a recipe for chicken salad for eight?
Mrs. T. J. M., Washington.

CHICKEN SALAD

2 cups diced cooked chicken
French dressing
1 slice pineapple, or ¼ cup drained, crushed pineapple
1 cup diced celery
1 teaspoon scraped onion
¼ cup shredded, toasted almonds
Salad dressing

Marinate chicken in French dressing for 1 hour or longer. Drain, if necessary. Add pineapple, onion, and almonds, with just enough salad dressing to moisten. Season with salt and pepper, if necessary. Chill and serve on lettuce, garnished with a few of the shredded almonds and ripe olives, if desired. This recipe serves eight.

PLAIN TAP WATER may be used in this revolutionary steam iron introduced here this week. Expensive distilled water isn't required and you can do an hour and a half of steaming on six ounces of water. New construction also eliminates the danger of spotting from drops of boiling water

DEAR ANNE:
I would like to know you! The reason: Well, I have "Tante Marie," the French cookbook you recently mentioned in connection with a query about where to get chestnut paste. It was given to me by my mother in Paris when I married 30 years ago.

Also, I would show you a little store here on Irving st. between 14th and 15th nw., where you would find all the nicest different groceries and the coffee grinders we use in France. The proprietor is a Gascon. And the smell of the shop! Ah, a little like les epiceries de chez nous! Marguerite Hadley, 2633 15th st. nw.

The shop Mrs. Hadley mentioned will order chestnut paste in five-pound lots for customers. Telephone number, Decatur 6717. Another local store sells imported French "creamed chestnut," a similar product containing ground chestnut, sugar, and vanilla, in packages weighing slightly over one pound. Telephone, Hudson 5030.

DEAR ANNE:
The other day somebody asked what silver could be wrapped with to prevent tarnishing. For the past 10 years, I have used anti-tarnish tissue. New York stores have it, and probably some local ones. MRS. R. B. HEILIG, 4341 36th st. S., Arlington, Va.

Yes, at least one local store does carry it in the stationery department; the telephone number, District 5300. The price is 50 cents for a package of 24 sheets, $2 for an "economy size" package of 96 sheets in four different sizes.

The Fashion in Khaki

D. C. Previews New Army Look

By Peggy Preston

NO LONGER will a girl need to know how to tie a four-in-hand in order to qualify for military service. Not after January, 1951, that is.

That's the date when the new uniforms for women of the Army will become regulation issue. And there won't be an old-fashioned mannish collar and tie in the lot.

A fashion show, presenting the new uniforms, was held last night at Fort Myer's Hopp Hall. It was the second showing of these Hattie Carnegie designs, and the first to be held in Washington. They were first previewed last month at Governor's Island in New York.

In the audience were representatives from those branches of the armed services that will be affected by the fashion changeover: the WAC, Army Nurses' Corps and Women's Specialist Corps.

Modeling the garments was a group of WACs from detachments in the Military District of Washington. They wore the following outfits:

Two-piece wool uniform, with buttoned-up lapels and neatly turned down collar. With this were shown two additional blouses (or jackets). One, of cream-beige rayon, is for dress. The other, of beige-taupe cotton oxford cloth, for duty wear.

Summer dress uniform, made of white Palm Beach cloth.

There are several innovations in color, cut and style of these latest fashions for the girls of the military. They are the result of recommendations made by the Advisory Committee of the National Research Council which selected the designs. Made up of leading stylists and designers, the committee denounced the idea of imitating men's uniforms for women. They recommended that the collar and tie idea be abandoned, because it is "unbecoming and unfeminine."

Miss Carnegie, creator of natty "little suits" for some of the country's best dressed women, was drafted to design the new garb. She selected the beige-taupe color because it blends nicely with regulation Army drab. Then she decreed some strictly feminine tailoring touches to the suit jackets, fitting them at the waistline, softening the shoulder-line, and topping them off with small, turned down collars.

Hats are also by Miss Carnegie. They are made of matching serge for winter, Palm Beach cloth for summer. Crowns are molded and brims curve up at one side. Brown leather handbags with over-shoulder strap were designed by Koret.

The change-over to these uniforms will be gradual. They may be worn now for off-duty wear, and when present stocks of issue equipment are exhausted, they may be used for on-duty wear.

Republicans Hear Senator

What we do in relation to other nations affects our entire domestic program, Senator Arthur V. Watkins of Utah told the League of Republican Women yesterday.

If we could be relieved of foreign expenditures, he continued, it would be possible to make a heavy cut in the Nation's taxation system, the budget could be balanced and our fiscal policy would be placed on a sound basis.

The greatest problem facing the nation is to decide on a foreign policy for the United States which will add to the nation's security and make possible a better domestic program, he said.

Following the supper meeting of the League group, Mrs. Davis Elkins, at whose home the meeting was held, was given a surprise birthday party. She was presented a silver tray from the evening group of the League "for her generosity in giving of her time and home for the League's activities."

Silver Spring Club Will Meet April 5

The Silver Spring Woman's Club will hold its regular monthly meeting April 1 at 11 a. m. at the Woodside Methodist Church. Mrs. Ralph Himstead will speak on "Local Government and What the Charter Has Accomplished."

The figure skating competition, which opens Thursday evening at Uline Arena, is sponsored by the Washington Figure Skating Club. Mrs. Travis Brown, chairman of advance sales for the league, reports that "several hundred" tickets already have been bought for the opening Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bachrach will give a cocktail party this afternoon for the officers and judges of the United States Figure Skating Association, here for the three-day meet.

Assisting Mrs. Bachrach will be Mrs. Dallas Dort, Mrs. Edgar M. McPeak, Mrs. William J. Miller, Mrs. John T. Hill, Mrs. H. Richard Josephson, Mrs. Lewis A. Sigler, Mrs. Walter N. Tobriner and Mrs. Warren F. Mosman.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

THERE'S a real blackface minstrel in town—a minstrel man of the old Primrose and Dockstatter Minstrel Shows. Eddie Nelson, now at the Hotel Annapolis Anchor Room, proudly recalls that he's been in show business for 56 years. A veteran of the Ziegfeld Follies and Midnight Frolics of the late Flo Ziegfeld, he took Eddie Cantor's role in the road production "Whoopee" in the early thirties.

In the "ship's-hold" Anchor Room, he strolls among the tables, singling people out for special songs, handling hecklers with a practiced manner, singing lustily without the aid of a mike. He knows all the forgotten stage techniques which vaudeville was so sure pleased the customers—and Nelson is sure still pleases them.

Perhaps he's right; the Annapolis cocktailers stop talking and stay put. They never leave while Nelson is on the scene. They tell him the old songs they'd like to hear again, he delivers with strictly an old-time flourish. "All By Myself," "The Sidewalks of New York," "Mamie" all come in for an inning.

THE next month at the Statler's Embassy Room will be devoted to the very polite music of Emil Coleman and his orchestra. He's the rotund, dapper leader in the society field of entertainment, whom debutantes consider so necessary at their coming out parties. His band has just finished a long engagement at the Waldorf.

While his music is basically the same society brand of so many orchestras, his melodies are a little clearer, his rhythms a little more catchy. But the essential thing, we are told, is that Coleman loves music so much. "In 30 years," his office says, "Emil Coleman has never once become tired of the routine of being an orchestra leader."

A singer and a comedian are also opening in the Embassy Room this week. Maureen Cannon, pint-sized musical comedy actress, had a leading role in George Abbott's "Best Foot Forward." Also in "Up in Central Park."

Story teller Georgie Gobel is a quiet comedian, with a seemingly effortless manner under the spotlights. With a casual style and a mandolin to strum, he tells the guests woeful but amusing tales of the "Sad Sack" variety.

Mrs. Ward Tells How To Make Her Banana Upside-Down Cake

HERE'S MRS. WARD'S RECIPE:

- 1½ cups sifted cake flour
- 1½ teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup Franklin Granulated Sugar
- ¼ cup softened shortening
- 1 egg
- ½ cup milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup firmly packed Franklin Old Fashioned Brown Sugar

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Add shortening, egg, milk and vanilla extract; mix until smooth. Beat 1 minute. Melt butter or margarine in 8" x 8" x 2" pan. Add brown sugar. Stir and heat until syrup is formed.

Arrange banana slices, in rows, in syrup. Pour over batter. Bake in moderate oven, 350°F. 50 minutes. Remove from pan, while warm. Serve warm. If desired, serve with lemon sauce . . . however you serve it, say friends of Mrs. N. S. Ward of 72 Pearl Drive, Pittsburgh—it's perfectly delicious! "And the trick is so simple," Mrs. Ward adds, "just be sure to use Franklin Pure Cane Sugar!" That way you'll always get:

Franklin's "Famous Five" Advantages

1. 100% Pure Sugar Cane Sugar
2. Extra-Fine Granulated
3. Fast-Dissolving

Quartet of Stars Brightens Gayety

By Richard L. Coe

A FINE CAST, knowing direction and a topical play make the New Gayety's second bill well worth while.

Faye Emerson, Sam Wanamaker,, Haila Stoddard and Bramwell Fletcher, as well as several others of the original company, are doing right by Fay Kanin's comedy, "Goodbye, My Fancy."

Miss Emerson, in fact as well as in the the play, is the heroine of the evening. Not only does she look lovely and play charmingly, she has developed a most agreeable finesse.

It was on the stage of the Old National that Miss Emerson made her theatrical bow in the bigtime East, in Gilbert Miller's revivial of "The Play's the Thing." That night one was fetched by the lady's looks, but hardly attracted by her voice, which then had a flat, toneless quality. Evidently the lady has been working on that voice, for last night's was a pleasantly varied speech, clear, lilting and at times quite silvery. It is the quality she lacked in the Molnar comedy and it is indeed a pleasure to note such evidence of professional growth.

In fact, had not Madeleine Carroll already captured hearts as Mrs. Kanin's Congresswoman, Miss Emerson is well qualified to have made the same success of the play the original Agatha Reed did. And although the Emerson activities are concentrated on television and radio, it's a safe bet that she may well become one of our most effective stage charmers.

"GOODBYE, MY FANCY." Harold Bromley and Eunice Healey present the comedy in three acts by Fay Kanin. Directed by Sam Wanamaker. At the Gayety.

THE CAST

Ginny Merrill	Helen Harrelson
Carol	Marie Phillips
Clarisse	Alison Prescott
Mary Nell	Patty Pope
Miss Shackleford	Aline McDermott
Janitors	John Holden, Scott Lewis
Telephone Man	John Donovan
Casual	Jeanne Flanigan
Jo	Susan Robinson
Grace Woods	Haila Stoddard
Agatha Reed	Faye Emerson
Ellen Griswold	Dortha Duckworth
Prof Birdeshaw	Katherine Squire
Dr. Pitt	George Mitchell
James Merrill	Bramwell Fletcher
Prof. Dingley	John Holden
Matt Cole	Sam Wanamaker
Claude Griswold	Hugh Rennie

The role is a good one. Agatha's back at her old college getting an honorary degree after a headline career as foreign correspondent and member of Congress. She's nursed a yen for her old history professor, was, in fact expelled on his account, and now he's the college president. Only when he proves weaker than her dreams in the matter of thought-freedom does the dew evaporate in her eyes.

What Mrs. Kanin has to say about the, er, liberal position is much what Messrs. Thurber and Nugent were stating in "The Male Animal." That the point still applies is evident in the current witch hunts and red herringitis. While she ties up her answer rather hastily in the third act (with the aid of a Hollywood education), she allows her characters good laugh lines and cracks that Washingtonians should be the first to enjoy.

Sam Wanamaker Scores

Nor is Miss Emerson the only skilled player of the evening. Sam Wanamaker is on hand to repeat his role of the original and also his directorial assignment. One recalls the baited reports from the north while "Goodbye" was being tried out and Wanamaker's subsequent acclaim for his direction. That he did the direction all over again is another cheering thing about the Gayety this week.

And Wanamaker the actor is right up there, too, a likable, facile fellow with the voice and stance that make the Life photographer exactly what the ideal Life photographer should be. Mrs. Luce's husband should send Sam a check.

Haila Stoddard is smart enough not to try all the tricks Shirley Booth used for the congressional secretary. She plays the cynical lady in a welcome, laugh-getting style of her own. Completing the top quartet is the able Bramwell Fletcher, giving another of his steady, expert performances as the vacillating president.

Patty Pope has moved up from her original role to do nicely as a wise senior, George Mitchell is the outspoken physics professor and Tom Donovan again has his brief moment as the telephone expert.

And you'll enjoy Katherine Squire's skilled timing as the astonished-to-be-in-love Professor Birdeshaw, Aline McDermott as the fidgety dean and Helen Harrelson as the prexy's daughter.

Yes, it's a pleasure to have Miss Emerson, Wanamaker and their pals in a comedy Washingtonians will thoroughly enjoy.

FIVEISH each afternoon the phone begins to jangle with irate parents who've enjoyed taking their kids to "Cinderella" at Keith's and then had the flavor wrecked by the sordid trailer of brutality advertising "Guilty of Treason," the film about Cardinal Mindszenty that's to be the next attraction. . . . Seems to me that showing scenes of violence to small fry attracted by Walt Disney is a funny way to win friends for the flicks.

BOTH THE DUPONT and the Little are showing an exceptional short with their exceptional comedy, "Tight Little Island." . . . The short's "Birth of a Ballet" and takes you to rehearsals of the Sadler's Wells Co. in London, with glimpses of ballet collaborators, the dancing corps and the stars. . . . With "The Red Shoes" holding over at the Trans-Lux, that makes three downtown houses ballet-conscious, which pleases Dancer Lisa Gardiner immensely.

MORE LIKE HELLO: The stars of the Gayety's "Goodbye, My Fancy," line up in cheerful form for that comedy about a Congresswoman. In the usual order: Bramwell Fletcher, Faye Emerson, Haila Stoddard and Sam Wanamaker

Postlude

Kapell and Ormandy Score In Rachmaninoff Concerto

By Paul Hume

William Kapell and Eugene Ormandy scored an immense triumph last night in the Philadelphia Orchestra's concert, played in Constitution Hall.

In Sergei Rachmaninoff's third piano concerto, the orchestra and popular young soloist combined with stellar results. The concerto was played here last month by Jorge Bolet and the National Symphony. It is a rich, somber score we are happy to hear twice in so short a time.

Its demands on both pianist and orchestra require the utmost virtuosity. Kapell is one of the leading younger pianists of the dazzling school. To his formidable technique he is steadily adding a degree of imagination and feeling that makes his playing a pleasure. We have yet to hear him in solo recital, a fact that should waken our concert managers to action.

Kapell handled every demand of the concerto with easy eclat. Few pianists today have the requisite strength to make the piano ride over the huge orchestration at the climaxes. That takes both a large hand and playing from the shoulders and back, a kind of piano playing not widely in vogue today.

Ormandy seconded the soloist at every point, with his orchestra sounding as rich as in the days when they played the music for Rachmaninoff himself, also under Ormandy.

The cuts, which the composer may have sanctioned, still seem unnecessary to us. Having heard the work uncut recently, we wish it had been played that way last night. The program concluded with the first symphony of Brahms.

Lane Approval Expected for Sothoron Bill

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Informed sources yesterday said Maryland's Governor W. Preston Lane, jr. will probably sign the Sothoron bill for Prince Georges County despite a warning as to its constitutionality.

These sources said that when Lane signs local bills passed by the 1950 Assembly—now scheduled for March 28 at 2 p. m.—he will put S. 43, the Prince Georges reorganization bill, on the books rather than leave the county without any valid method of conducting an election of county commissioners next November.

Because of a flaw in a 1949 statute, the number of county commissioners to be elected in Prince Georges is not now specified.

Should Governor Lane veto Senator L. Harold Sothoron's bill, most sources agree, the county would have to resort to extraordinary action in order to hold an election.

Senator Sothoron said a special session of the legislature would be necessary to permit the election.

Attorny General Hall Hammond also indicated that the county might take its dilemma to the courts.

Hammond explained yesterday that in sending the Sothoron bill and 33 others on to Governor Lane with a warning about their constitutionality, he was simply "flagging him to watch out" for the bills to be sure they qualified under constitutional requirements for passage.

The Governor already had acknowledged he was studying the question: Would a veto on those grounds usurp authority reserved to the courts?

Harmond denied that he had commented specifically, as reported earlier, on the merits of the Sothoron bill, beyond placing it in the warning category.

Hammond issued similar warnings on five other bills affecting nearby Maryland areas.

One would raise the salary of the Montgomery County sheriff from $4000 to $4800 and another would transfer jurisdiction over the Montgomery Jail from the sheriff to the County Council.

Three other bills, all referring to the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission would: authorize it to supervise house connections within its jurisdiction; permit it to float a million-dollar bond issue for storm drainage; redefine legislation affecting WSSC passed in 1949 because its legality has been questioned.

There appeared a definite possibility that the Sothoron reorganization bill might receive a court test should Lane sign it into law.

Corning Seeks Leave Peace With Teachers

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning yesterday held out an olive branch to teachers who have waged a battle against his views on sick-leave legislation.

The school head proposed an amendment to the present law that would ease a situation under which teachers lose a month's credit for retirement when absent one day without pay. He recommended lengthening the period to 15 days in any one month before retirement credit would be lost.

Dr. Corning offered the 15-day extension plan at a committee meeting of the Board of Education after presenting arguments against a bill introduced in Congress by Senator Olin D. Johnson (D., S.C.). The bill would amend the teachers Sick Leave Act approved last year.

Back Johnson Bill

While Dr. Corning was presenting his arguments to the school board, the Teachers' Advisory Council, a representative group of teachers and school officers, met at Wilson Teachers College and reaffirmed support of the Johnson bill by a vote of 44 to 17.

The bill, which has the support of teacher unions, would give teachers the right to hire substitutes at their own expense after sick leave is used up. Under provisions of the bill, teachers would remain on the pay roll during long illness and build up retirement credit.

The committee postponed taking a stand on the Johnson bill in order to hear Miss Marion Magruder, president of Local 8, American Federation of Teachers. First she will give the union's view of the bill before a meeting of the full board at 3:30 p. m. today.

Dr. Corning also submitted to board members a series of amendments to the Teachers' Retirement Act that would bring its provisions in line with those of the Civil Service Retirement Act.

The proposal, approved by the committee, would increase pay roll deductions from 5 to 6 percent.

Also Change Formula

It would change the formula for computing a teacher's retirement to give her more money. A teacher with 40 years of experience now receiving $2400, would receive approximately $200 more a year.

At present the retirement is figured on the basis of 1 percent of average salary plus $20 multiplied by the number of years of service up to 40.

The new method would give a teacher a choice of 1 percent of average salary plus $25 multiplied by the number of years of service with no limitation set. Or, she could take 1½ percent of average salary for each year of service.

British Judges Rebuked for Flogging Views

London, March 21 (NYHT)—Viscount Jowitt, who as Lord Chancellor is head of England's judiciary, today cracked down on judges who have been agitating for restoration of flogging as punishment for crimes of violence.

In recent weeks sharp increases in violent crimes, comprising principally street attacks, have brought demands for a return to flogging as a deterrent. But Lord Jowitt told the House of Lords today that although the present situation "is very grave" the government has "no intention whatever of reintroducing" corporal punishment abolished in 1948.

Many judges, in passing sentence for crimes of violence recently, have said in effect: "I only wish I could have you whipped."

Referring to this today, Lord Jowitt said:

"I hope judges won't go on pointing this out in a way which rather indicates they are criticizing the legislature. Nothing is more certain than this, that the intention of the legislator is to pass laws and the function of the judges is to administer them."

Pope Pius XII—Priest and Statesman

Nuncio Pacelli Asks Help of Kaiser to Bring Peace to World

Kees Van Hoek, a native of The Hague and now an Irish citizen, has been a correspondent in London, Geneva and the United States. His first biography of Pius XII appeared in 1939. After much research and a private audience with the Pope last fall, Van Hoek has written in "Pope Pius XII, Priest and Statesman," a full and vivid description of the man and his career, from a delicate boy in Rome to supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic world. The biography is presented by The Washington Post during the present Holy Year in 24 daily installments.

Foreign Affairs Writer of the Irish Times

IV—Nuncio Visits Kaiser

POPE PIUS X, not a brilliant mind, but a saintly pastor of souls, died from a broken heart shortly after the outbreak of the World War, in August, 1914. His successor was Benedict XV, who as Cardinal dela Chiesa had been both Gasparri's and Pacelli's immediate superior. He nominated Cardinal Gasparri his Secretary-of-State, Monsignor Pacelli became head of the Congregation for Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs.

In the Papal Archives there is a row of 60 heavy bundles of papers, dryly listed in impeccable Latin De Caritate Sanctae Sedis Trga Gallos; 1792-1803—"About the Assistance of the Holy See to the French," those clerics, aristocrats and citizens who had fled the dungeons and the guillotine of the French Revolution.

That greatest tradition of the Father of Christendom, Benedict XV was determined to uphold. In December, 1914, he put proposals before the French and German Governments to exchange those prisoners of war who were unfit for further military service. Thirty thousand were thus cleared through Swiss territory. Thereupon the Pope suggested the return of civilians too young or too old for active service; 3000 Belgians and 20,000 French from the occupied areas were in consequence released by Germany, while 10,000 wounded soldiers of both camps, at his further initiative, were brought to Switzerland in December, 1915, to recuperate.

Worked Day and Night

PROMINENT prisoners were pardoned through his efforts, and all Bishops were instructed to collect news of missing persons and prisoners of war, so as to lessen the suspense of their relatives at home. All this work was concentrated under Monsignor Pacelli, who worked literally day and night, having created a special office for the purpose and trained a specially chosen staff.

But the Pope's aspirations went further. He was biding the opportune moment for an intervention on a much greater scale in the cause of peace. At the end of April, 1917, he placed Eugenio Pacelli at the most advanced post in his scheme, that of Papal Nuncio at Munich. Nominally accredited to the Catholic Kingdom of Bavaria, then still the most independent state within the framework of the German Empire, it was really his direct link with the Imperial Government at Berlin, where under the Protestant Hohenzollerns a nunciature had not been feasible.

To mark the importance of his post, Pacelli was elevated to the Titular Archbishopric of Sardes and consecrated by the Pope himself in the Sistine Chapel—which 22 years later would see him elected Pope. With what intensity Benedict must have prayed as, enthroned on the high altar underneath Michelangelo's "Last Judgment," he laid his hands on the collaborator he had chosen for the most difficult charge at the most difficult time, invoking the solemn episcopal consecration: "Receive the Holy Ghost" . . .

Actually Exhausted

THAT SUMMER it looked to neutral onlookers as if there was some sort of a balance between the positions of the two great armed camps. The Central Powers, it is true, seemed to hold the whip hand, for had they not occupied all Belgium, Northern France, large tracts of Russia, all Romania and Serbia? But in reality they were exhausted after their many victories.

The Allies, on the other hand, had only just begun to organize their overseas supply and, great as was the havoc wrought by the submarines, the steady flow of fresh recruits could not be stemmed. Thus, Pope Benedict calculated, there was an honorable chance for both parties, since the Central Powers' present strategic position and the Allies' enormous future reserves balanced each other.

When Nuncio Pacelli reached Munich to take up his first diplomatic post, he was at once received, with full regal pomp, at the residence of the Bavarian Prince Regent, to hand over his letters of credence. But a few days afterward we find him already in Berlin and reporting "a very good reception" from the Imperial Chancellor, von Bethmann-Hollweg. Behind the scenes his first meeting with the Kaiser was quietly arranged. It took place on July 29, 1917, in the Imperial Headquarters at Kreuznach, that delightful Baden Spa. War was not allowed to be forgotten in the city of roses and nightingales. All officers of the Imperial Household were in field grey; only the Kaiser, though it was 10 o'clock in the morning, had donned his full-dress uniform of a Prussian Field-Marshal, to receive the Nuncio. He remained standing the whole time of the audience, holding his helmet under his left arm.

Asks Help for Peace

MONSIGNOR Pacelli handed His Majesty a letter written in the Pope's own hand, soliciting the Kaiser's help in the promotion of peace. Wilhelm II read it then and there, and remarked that in the previous December he himself had already broached a peace offer, but without result. Nuncio Pacelli emphasized that it needed more detailed propositions, but it soon became clear to the diplomat that the Kaiser did not want another initiative, that he firmly believed in the final victory of his troops.

The Kaiser, furthermore, had very fixed ideas of how the Pope should conduct his affairs. He should mobilize the Catholic Episcopate all over the world in a moral peace offensive, and begin by using his especial influence on Catholic states by promoting peace between Italy and Austria. When the Nuncio drew the Kaiser's attention to the impracticality of such a scheme, since there existed a strong war party in Italy against Austria (led, amongst others, by the editor of the Popolo d'Italia, a certain Benito Mussolini) the Kaiser assured the Nuncio that His Holiness "need not fear the scum." Warming up to his pet subject, strategy, he began to outline how the Pope could defend the Vatican. "I have been there myself," he told Pacelli, and his easy fantasy quickly turned the palace of the Vatican into a veritable fortress.

The Nuncio was more than amazed. Then deftly turning to practical use the Kaiser's obvious satisfaction with his own elocution, he elicited a promise to check the excessive German deportation of Belgian civilians. Years later, in his Gedanken and Erinnerungen ("Musings and Recollections") Wilhelm II gave this description of Nuncio Pacelli:

"He has a distinguished sympathetic appearance, he is of a high intelligence and has impeccable manners; in short, the prototype of a Prince of the Church."

The Imperial description holds good to this day.

A 'Classic' Sometimes Lasts a Whole Month

"If you're going to buy me a recording of 'I Said My Pajamas,' I wish you'd make a point of getting it today," said my 14-year-old relative at breakfast yesterday.

"What's the hurry?" I asked. "Won't tomorrow, or next week, do just as well?"

He shook his head. "I'd like to get the record while the song is still popular," he said. "By next week it may be ancient history."

PARAGON

I've just heard a perfectly wonderful story about one of Washington's well-known executives.

The action in his "night out" poker game was so hot and heavy that the session lasted until 9 a. m.

Going directly from the game to his office, Mr. Executive proceeded to raise the roof with the entire staff for not getting to work on time. It was the first time he'd ever been around that early.

MISCELLANY

That was a good suggestion by the comedian at the Capitol Theater: "Combine Pepsi-Cola and Energine; when Pepsi-Cola hits the spot, Energine will take it out." . . . Ruth H. Lane of 619 N. Jefferson st., Arlington, Va., writes: "Out our way, we've had seven 'drives' recently. They're all for worthy causes. But a drive a day is enough to drive us away. When is somebody going to start a drive to support contributors to drives?" . . . Be patient, Ruth. Maybe some day they'll really have one—and only one—big drive each year, as proposed by Community Chest Chairman Frank Lucas recently . . . Meantime, here's a worthy cause that doesn't require any money. Mrs. Harvey W. Lance of 4506 Chestnut st., Bethesda, Md., suggests that when your spring cleaning turns up unwanted items of clothing, the Quaker Clothing Relief office at 2111 Florida ave. nw., (Columbia 9799) would certainly like to hear from you, because they need much clothing for shipment to needy peoples overseas. . . . One of my constituents at the United States Naval Academy writes from Crabtown: "If Clark Griffith is looking for pitchers, I've got a wonderful prospect for him. I've just returned from a quiz in Marine Engineering, and I can assure you that the man who devised that test is a master at throwing curves" . . . Frank J. Kraus of 909 20th st. nw., says if we're going to have Daylight Saving Time, it ought to be National in scope, rather than piecemeal, so that it would not mess up radio, television, train, plane and bus schedules . . . Good idea, except how are you going to get 48 State legislatures to act in unison? . . . Bernice M. Willey of Lanham, Md., observes: "A man without a sense of humor is like a wagon without springs; they both get a jolt from every pebble on the road."

URGENT

To the boys on the city desk, it's all in a day's work. They are currently in receipt of a postcard requesting them to publicize the fact that unforeseen complications have forced cancellation of the executive committee meeting scheduled for the Shoreham.

But unfortunately, the card is unsigned and carries no clue as to the identity of the sender or the organization he represents.

WALL, I DECLARE

Kurt Rosenwald of 2230 Savannah ter. se., notes that last Sunday's Washington Post listed "The Wall" as the Nation's best-selling fiction and "I Leap Over the Wall" among the best-selling nonfiction. Murmurs Kurt:

"Wonder if it's the same wall."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Homeless female, about 1 year old, looks like mixture of cocker and collie; small, gentle, affectionate—but the dogcatcher is looking for her. No tag." (Alexandria 5668.)

"Two black kittens, 2 months old; housebroken." (Woodley 1435 before 1 p. m. or after 6 p. m.)

"Intensely loyal male dog with short black hair wants farm or suburban home." (Owens 2460.)

"Four-month-old female pup, part German shepherd." (Vienna, Va., 131-J-21.)

"Pretty, affectionate tortoise-shell kitten with white feet." (Vienna, Va., 469.)

THE GIRL HE LEFT BEHIND

Mrs. Valentín Gubitchev greeted her handcuffed hubby with a hug and a kiss when they met on Monday. But by this time the Polish liner Batory is far enough at sea for Guby to be hearing the Russian equivalent of:

"So you were merely carrying out your orders as a spy, eh? So you thought of me every minute of the time you were with that woman, eh? Just wait'll I get you home, you big bum."

CHEER UP, NEIGHBOR

Shake off your woes and fears.
For life is made of sterner stuff
Than shadows, dreams and tears.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Atom-Defense Cost Pictured

By Drew Pearson

Here are some situations that most Americans don't know about, but which concern them vitally:

Situation No. 1 — The future atomic - hydrogen defense of Washington, D. C., according to atomic scientists, must require a ring of fire stations 15 miles out of the city and completely around the city. Present fire stations inside the city would be wiped out and useless in case of an enemy attack.

Pearson

It will require from 10,000 to 15,000 regularly trained and paid firemen to man these stations. The defense of New York, a city nine times the size of Washington, would require at least nine times as many firemen—about 100,000—and cost nine times as much. In brief, the defense of our big cities against future hydrogen bombing would just about bankrupt us. Peace will be cheaper.

Situation No. 2—In Paris, French Foreign Minister Schumann told critics of American arms under the Atlantic pact that these arms would permit France to defend herself against Germany. He did not mention Russia, the nation that actually inspired the North Atlantic Pact. Some Europeans are now wondering whether we ourselves really mean business in opposing Russia.

The United States is caught in a European cross-fire—Communists who hate us and non-Communists who think we are governed by Communists. The latter have been reading Senator Joe McCarthy. Only brief cables regarding the McCarthy charges are carried to Europe. Cable tolls are expensive, newsprint precious. As a result, European non-Communists are confused, the Communists gleeful. McCarthy has done a great job for Moscow.

The Senate Restaurant—Every noon when Republican Senators sit down at lunch they ask each other: "How's Joe doing?" They are referring, not to Joe Stalin, but to their colleague, Joe McCarthy of Wisconsin. They agree that Joe isn't doing well, but they think he's winning votes for Republicans. Senator Taft, now the leader of the party, expressed it this way: "I told Joe," he said, "to keep talking. I don't think he's got anything. But the longer he talks, the more people will think he has something."

Midwest Opinion — Partly inflamed by the Chicago Tribune, partly worked up by astute political speeches, the drift toward isolation continues. Secretary of State Dean Acheson, a scholar more than a politician, has lost so much political appeal that some Senate leaders want Truman to dump him.

Prague, Czechoslovakia—The Iron Curtain is really becoming iron. Hitherto, the satellite countries were ruled by local Communists. Now Moscow plans to take over Bulgaria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Rumania in toto, putting them under Russian dictators.

Poland is already under Dictator-General Rokossovsky. Bulgaria probably will be next. That was one reason for cracking down on the American legation in Sofia and on Vogler in Budapest. Moscow wants all Americans out from behind the Iron Curtain, and wants that vast area ruled as an integral part of Russia. If and when this happens, the chances of another Tito vanish.

Key West, Florida—President Truman sits in the sun, oblivious of congressional bitterness, oblivious of his slipping foreign policy . . . If the United States drifts back into isolation, there is no other way but the ring of fire stations around Washington, New York, Detroit.

In addition to Republicans, many Democrats are bitter at Truman. They feel that overnight—election night of November, 1948—he was transformed from a humble little man who asked all Americans to help him, to a boastful little "I-did-it" Harry.

Inner Democratic Circles—Democratic leaders would like to see their President launch a bold, brave move for a unified nation. They recall how President Roosevelt conferred repeatedly with Wendell Willkie, brought elder GOP statesmen Henry L. Stimson and Frank Knox into his Cabinet. They wish Truman would call Dewey, Stassen, Warren of California to a conference on the vital problems facing this country—before it is too late.

The advance guard of the Iron Curtain—Along the Hungarian-Yugoslav border more and more divisions of the Red army have been moved up, including mechanized divisions. They are equipped with machine shops and heavy repair units, which do not accompany troops unless they are heading for battle. Some Russian troops, seized by Yugoslavs in border raids, have maps showing Yugoslav airports and Danube bridges.

It looks as if the Red army is waiting for spring and dry weather for the big push against the one man who has successfully defied Stalin.

BALDNESS due to AGE?
Perhaps, but . . . your hair should grow fastest when you are 30 to 40!

Consult Ray W. Plasterer, one of the Nation's leading Trichologists Think twice before you blame your thinning hair on your age, and let it go at that.
Age is not the trouble in most cases. Trichologists say that hair naturally grows most rapidly between the ages of 30 and 40—the years, oddly enough, when most men are getting bald! If your hair does not prosper during these years some local disorder (dandruff, dryness, or excessive oiliness) may be robbing your scalp of a healthy head of hair.
Bring your problems to the Hair and Scalp Clinic, let Ray W. Plasterer remove that local disorder, and normalize your hair and scalp.
